Industrious Mouse
Nose Egg-Rolling
Mr. Grant's New Plan
Ultra Specialization

—By Arthur Brisbane—

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 26—Two interesting tests of endurance noticed. Some scientist has put a field mouse into a contrivance that registers the movements of animals. That energetic little creature runs, in one night, more than 100,000 feet, or 20 miles.

Amazed at the energy bound up in that tiny heart, you say to yourself, "and all for a miserable little mouse." To the creator of the mouse, that creature may be as important as one of us "lords of creation."

In the other contest of skill and endurance, a group of children will participate after the Easter egg rolling festivities at the Coral Gables Biltmore Hotel. The children will see which can roll an egg along the ground 100 feet, in the shortest time, touching the egg with nothing except the end of the nose.

That seems a waste of intellectual effort, but it compares favorably with some educational methods prevailing in our modern schools and universities.

A boy rolling an egg with his nose might possibly learn something, whereas in some of the "educating processes" to which youth is submitted you can't learn ANYTHING.

nd servicing of the three cars will be co-ordinated. The new organization, under Mr. Grant, will have as general salesman W. H. Blees, who has been with General Motors more than seven years and sales manager for Pontiac for the last two years.

The idea is to put all the selling power of Buick, Olds and Pontiac into one organization, bigger in size and greater in energy than three separate organizations that are superseded. Thousands of agents and hundreds of thousands of automobile users are interested in this important automobile news.

A well known citizen, not satisfied with conditions, says we have gone too far in the line of specialization, and adds:

> "This country does not need what is humorously called a government by the people, any longer. We expect a few rich to pay the expenses of the country. We allow a few gangsters to run it, they and the bootleggers enjoying its largest incomes. A few prohibition fanatics govern us. Why waste time electing a President or Congress?"

Congress with its spade is busy trying to "dig up" new sources of income. A tax on automobiles, radios, gasoline, theaters, are all advocated. Every one of them would be a distinctly ANNOYING tax, penalizing a certain class of citizens to avoid a general tax that, like conscription in war, is the only remedy when it becomes necessary.

Later, when the "digging up" process proves a failure, it will be necessary to substitute an axe for the spade and begin chopping government expenses.

The first step in a Congress so generous in disposing of the incomes of others would be to reduce the pay of Congressmen by one-half. This would help them to realize conditions, as nothing else could do. And such a reduction in congressional pay would be along the lines of sound business, which forbids paying for a thing more than twice what it is worth.

The city of Kenosha in Wisconsin shows what things can be done by those not afraid to use an axe. Wisconsin's tax committee finds that Kenosha has a surplus of more than $77,000, although its expenditures for charity, caused by unemployment, have increased by $241,000.

Some of our biggest cities will find themselves compelled to do some chopping.

With the best will in the world you cannot take from land owners more money than they take in.

There are other ways of making ends meet.

For instance, John H. Perry, who owns the Jacksonville Journal, and some other newspapers, informs Col. Frank B. Shutts, who owns the Miami Herald, and also the biggest law business in southern Florida, that Jacksonville makes a profit of a

20 Marchers Seized as Officers Tear Down Banners in Battle at Embassy

Washingtin, March 26 (AP)—A lively fight broke out today as police attempted to halt a group of radicals who tried to parade past the Japanese embassy in Massachusetts ave.

Denied permission to parade past the embassy, the radical group marched by in squads of two or three, formed in line and carrying banners, one of which was inscribed, "Down with Japanese imperialism."

A girl carrying a banner led the group. Police attempted to halt them and immediately fighting broke out.

Police used clubs and blackjacks in subduing two or three of the men who fought fiercely. There were almost as many officers as demonstrators and within a few minutes the placards and banners were down and policemen in pairs led the demonstrators away toward police patrols.

Several of the group had been handled so roughly they needed support to hold them up.

Police estimated that 20 of the demonstrators had been arrested.

Congressmen Underhill, Luce and Dallinger also voted "dry" a few days ago on the question of resubmission of the 18th amendment, being the only Bay State congressmen to so vote. Mrs. Rogers voted "wet."

Irish Women Will Lead Parades

BULLETIN

London, March 26 (INS)—Announcement came from President Eamonn de Valera today that there can be "no compromise" on abolition of the oath of allegiance to King George. He said by telephone from Dublin to the London Evening Star:

"You can take it as certain that there is no truth whatever in the suggestion of a compromise."

Dublin, March 26 (INS)—Women will take a leading role in the nationwide demonstrations Sunday to commemorate the Easter-week revolution of 1916, in which hundreds were killed and in which Great Britain executed 16 Republicans.

The current dispute with England over the oath of allegiance to the Crown is linked everywhere with plans for the celebration, which public officials openly admit probably will result in serious trouble.

Cumann Na Mban, an organization of women Republicans, has been equally active with the Irish Republican army in stirring the public to aid in breaking the oath of allegiance.

Free State citizens are called out for the scheduled parades, meetings and demonstrations, with an anti-English plea linked with the 1916 proclamation of the republic.

Mary McSwiney, widow of the Lord Mayor of Cork, who died on a patriotic hunger strike, and Maude Gonne McBride, known as "The Irish Joan of Arc," will lead in the demonstrations.

Harry W. Mack, prisoner at Charles st. jail, told his lawyer, John J. Maloney, today that he could lead authorities to a house where the kidnaped Lindbergh baby is, or was, hidden.

This information, he claims, was given him two weeks before the kidnaping in Windsor, Ont., jail by Harold Fontaine, Detroit "Purple" gangster, who was his cellmate.

Fontaine was arrested in Windsor in January, having shipped into Leavenworth penetentiary the guns used by seven inmates to force their way to temporary liberty in December, and he has since been fighting extradition to the United States with an apparently unlimited source of funds.

A 32-page deposition made by Mack, charging Fontaine told him all of the details of the Leavenworth plot, will be used by the Department of Justice in an effort to get Fontaine back to the United States, and federal agents today asked Mack's detention as a "ma-

TRIO AGAIN ASSERTS RETURN NEAR

Lindbergh Plans New Appeal; Runner Tells the Officials of Seeing Suspects on Boat

BULLETINS

Norfolk, Va., March 26 (AP)—The Ledger-Dispatch said today that John Hughes Curtis, one of three intermediaries here working for the return of the Lindbergh child, left Norfolk today by boat and it was expected he would make contact with either the kidnapers or their go-betweens.

Norfolk, Va., March 26 — Orders were issued today to the 16 U. S. Coast Guard boats operating around Norfolk to stop and board every strange or off-season yacht that appears in Chesapeake waters. The orders were issued by Commander W. A. Benham, and follow reports that the missing child is secreted on a boat somewhere in the Chesapeake Bay region.

Hopewell, N. J., March 26 (AP)—While three Norfolk citizens did their best to restore kidnaped Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., to his parents today, his father was believed to be considering issuing a fourth appeal to the persons who stole the child March 1.

Thrice Col. Lindbergh, willing to pay ransom to get the child back, has issued public pleas to the kidnapers to open negotiations, but these have failed to accomplish the desired object. Information from friends of the family was that he might try again. He has pledged himself not to try to injure the kidnapers if they will return the child.

Hopewell, N. J., March 26—A midnight visit to Col. Lindbergh's home by the rum runner, who has positively identified a picture of Harry Fleischer as one of the crew of three he saw on a cabin cruiser on rum row, today gave fresh impetus to the greatest man-hunt in history, and stirred the coast guard to feverish activity as search was directed seaward for the kidnaped Lindbergh baby.

GREAT HUNT IS ON

The rum runner who entered the case only on condition that his name be withheld, traveled to the Sourland Mountains and shortly after midnight told his story to John A. Fogarty, who has been a member of the Lindbergh household since the night of the kidnaping.

Fogarty is a former Long Island detective who is now associated with Col. Henry Breckenridge and who acts as Lindbergh's personal representative in the absence of the New York lawyer.

Col. Schwarzkopf, head of the state police and in charge of police activities, refused to comment on the story, but it is known that he immediately got in touch with the coast guard, and today they will scour the Atlantic Highlands, Chesapeake Bay and every other possible place of refuge which may be acting as a harbor for the kidnapers and their precious cargo.

Whether the rum runner's story confirms the statement of the three prominent men of Norfolk that they have proof that the baby is held at sea and that their negotiations with the kidnapers are about to bring the return of the child is a matter of great speculation here.

REPORT RECENT MEETING

The Virginian pilot said that the three men had made a contact with a representative of the kidpapers since their return from Hopewell, N. J., and that the meeting occurred early Thursday morning. Asked specifically about this, John Huges Curtis, one of the trio, told the Associated Press, "I am not in a position to answer that."

Detective Leon Nowitzky, one of those having the assignment, said he was investigating a number of letters from persons claiming to have some knowledge of the whereabouts of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr. He joined the intervenors in expressing regret at publicity given to negotiations alleged to be in progress and promised "the next development will be so airtight that there'll be no chance for a leak." He also expressed confidence that the child would be returned "at an early date, possibly today."

EXPRESS CONFIDENCE

Similar confidence was expressed by the Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock, the only one of the negotiators who has made any statement other than a formal one declining to discuss their part in the case. He reiterated expressions of confidence in the successful outcome of their efforts and said he expected negotiations to be completed within the next few days.

Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage, retired, and John Hughes Curtis, boat builder, remaining members of the trio, declined to add to their statement that what transpired at their conference earlier in the week with Col. Lindbergh was a matter of the "strictest confidence."

The optimistic expressions were in sharp contrast with New Jersey police reports that Col. Lindbergh himself placed "no specific significance" on the Norfolk investigation.

Speculation was rife as to the Lindbergh statement of yesterday that the information furnished by the Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock and two other Norfolk men was considered to have "no significance."

Observers of the great hunt for the child pointed out that in dealing with kidnapers secrecy was a paramount necessity, and that there might be more behind the official statemnts than appeared. This was a matter, however, on which there was no official information.

Police had no doubt the go-between who approached the Virginia men represented himself as an agent of the kidnapers, but authorities believed that the question of substantiating the claim was another matter. This go-between is reported to have said the kidnapers would return the child under certain conditions.

BELIEVE BABY AT SEA

For a long while, it was said, Col. Schwarzkopf has believed that the child was being held on a boat of some kind. Perhaps 110 million people are consciously or subconsciously looking for the child and only on the sea would be kidnapers be safe from detection, was said to be the colonel's belief.

For a long time, too, the authorities have been anxious to question Harry Fleischer and Abie Wagner, branded "known kidnapers" by state police, and police of every city in the United States have been looking for them.

Col. Schwarzkopf's official news bulletin today again pointed out that the authorities are seeking Harry Fleischer, reputed leader of the Detroit "Purple gang" and Abie Wagner of New York's lower East Side, both branded "kidnapers."

In addition, the statement of Schwarzkopf said his office had no information, officially, concerning Harry W. Mack.

TODAY'S BULLETIN

Schwarzkopf's statement said:

"No information concerning Harry W. Mack has been received at these headquarters, either from the Canadian authorities or the Boston police. There is nothing in the conduct of our investigation at this time which involves Harry Mack in the kidnaping.

"We are awaiting reports from the authorities investigating him as to their findings.

"Wagner and Fleischer, being known kidnapers and not having been seen or accounted for since shortly before the kidnaping, it is desired to pick them up for questioning as to their activities prior to and since the kidnaping.

"Other kidnaping suspects have been similarly picked up and questioned and their stories checked.

"All telephone calls from this house (the Lindbergh home in Hopewell) and also any others which appear to have any significance have been checked, but nothing of importance disclosed.

1500 "Leads" in Case File

Hopewell, N. J., March 26—The checking of "leads" in the Lindbergh case goes on. The state police have a card index of them. It contains 1500 cards.

The rum runner, who told his story to state police here early today, is the first to forge a definite link in the chain which some day may bring Fleischer and Wagner into the police net. He swears that one of the men on the cabin cruiser was Fleischer and he positively identified another as a man police have been looking for.

INFORMER ALARMED

The rum runner, obviously relieved that his story had been told to some one in authority, once more fell prey to the fears of one who has interfered with the underworld.

"I don't know whether Fogarty believed me or not," he said, as the car sped back to Trenton. "I'm on the level with this, though. I have nothing to gain by telling it. If those mobsters ever knew who I am they'll put the finger on me, all right. I don't know Fleischer. Never saw him until that day, but I know that was Fleischer I saw on that cabin cruiser. That baby is still on that boat or has been transferred to a schooner."

He told Fogarty of his experience the day after the kidnaping, with only a yellow moon and a chilling wind as witnesses.

Professing a fear of the police, whom he thinks would have arrested him for his confessed rum running activities, he consented to tell his story to either Lindbergh or some one designated by him only after Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, Jersey state police head, had assured the International News Service representative that neither he nor any of his men would molest the man.

"Our interest is only in getting the baby back safely," Schwarzkopf said. "Any one who has information to offer will be given an opportunity to tell his story."

REPEATS HIS STORY

When the rum runner was assured that he was safe from police interference he hurried from New York to Trenton, where a fast car whisked him through the winding roads to Hopewell and then up the torturous trail that leads to the Lindbergh home.

Troopers on guard fell back when they learned who it was. Schwarzkopf was keeping faith with the man and as the white fastness of the Lindbergh home loomed out of the night, he gave a sigh of relief.

Colonel Lindbergh himself was asleep, but Detective Fogarty was waiting, shivering in the depths of a huge coat which couldn't keep out the numbing chillness of a Sourland mountain wind.

Fogarty and the rum runner talked for 15 minutes alone in the comparative warmth of the car. The story Fogarty heard was substantially the same one which the rum runner previously told to the International News Service.

He had set off early at four a. m. Wednesday, March 2.

REFUSES REQUEST

That afternoon he was about 30 miles off Scotland light, trying to contact a schooner. He told Fogarty of meeting with a high riding schooner apparently without cargo and of a surly supercargo who ordered him away from the ship in no uncertain terms. This man was later identified by him as one of three suspects for whom police of New Jersey, New York city, and Detroit are looking.

Less than an hour later he sighted a cabin cruiser with a member of the crew waving a coat in an apparent signal of distress. Investigation proved that the cruiser's compass had gone bad, and the informer was asked if he would sell his compass for $100.

He refused, but offered to fix the compass belonging to the white and green cruiser. It was at this point that he heard a baby's cry, and then with a snarl of anger the man who had waved the coat ordered him to shove away. There were three men in the crew and the rum runner unhesitatingly identified Harry Fleischer as one of them.

All this he told to Fogarty as the two sat in the back seat of the car.

The whiteness of the Lindbergh home accentuated the darkness for no clouds hid the moon and only the feeble headlights of the car cut the veil of night thrown over the Sourland mountains. One knew that Col. Schwarzkopf was only a short distance away in the Lindbergh garage and one knew that a dozen troopers were within call but Schwarzkopf was living up to his word. The rum runner never was further from capture than at that moment within a stone's throw of the troopers' headquarters.

Fogarty heard his story in silence. He climbed out of the car, said good night and walked into the Lindbergh home. He would tell his story to the colonel. In the morning but long before that the alert Schwarzkopf would have set the wheels into motion and the story would be checked and rechecked as far as possible.

Several clues pursued by Schwarzkop's forces came to nothing, his most recent bulletin stated.

It was issued about the same time reports became current Lindbergh considered making his fourth public appeal to the kidnapers to get into communication with him to discuss the safe return of the baby on any terms.

Mike Dries, reported to have been near the Lindbergh home on the day of the kidnaping, was brought from Bristol, Pa., to Hopewell and questioned, but he was released when a partial check-up appeared to confirm the statements he made of his movements.

The men seen by Miss Theresa Dersi, Wertsville, N. J., in a car near Hopewell, who appeared suspicious to her, were found to have been sound picture recorders.

Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, mother of Mrs. Anne Lindbergh, returned to her Englewood home for a few hours, but said she would soon rejoin the Lindberghs at Hopewell.

Kidnap Tipster

Harry W. Mack, Boston bail-jumper extradited from Canada on theft charges, says he can solve the Lindbergh kidnaping if permitted to question Betty Gow, the nurse.

MACK IS HELD IN BABY KIDNAPING

KNEW OF KIDNAPING PLOT

Mack claims Fontaine knew of the "Purple Gang's" plan to kidnap the Lindbergh heir when he was arrested and that he told him of it two weeks before it happened.

Atty. Maloney said Mack had not intimated that Betty Gow had knowledge of the crime but only mentioned that he came from the same Scottish town as the Lindbergh nurse.

Maloney also denied that Mack had claimed to have lived in Hartford with Henry "Red" Johnson, the nurse's sweetheart, but said he did claim to have knowledge of details of the abduction plan and where the child was to be concealed.

Maloney said he would appeal to a federal court judge for a writ of habeas corpus to free Mack from Charles st. in order that he could be taken to Windsor on Tuesday by Department of Justice agents to testify at a hearing on Fontaine's extradition.

Maloney and the federal agents are satisfied that Mack's story, at least insofar as it concerns the Leavenworth break, is absolutely correct.

Mack was brought from Montreal to Boston yesterday after making his deposition to a United States consular agent.

Local Department of Justice agents conferred with Deputy Supt. James McDevitt and as a result a federal "detainer" was placed on Mack at police headquarters, at the jaid and in court where he will be arraigned Monday in connection with an auto larceny case on which he jumped bail last year.

LIAR OR HE KNOWS

Mack is either an extraordinary liar or he has vital information not only in connection with the Lindbergh kidnaping but affecting the federal penitentiary riot.

He is a native of Scotland and same town as Betty Gow, the Lindbergh nurse, and he was en route to St. John, N. B., for deportation when he made his startling deposition which attracted the attention claims to have been born in the of Secretary of State Stimson and led to him being brought to Boston.

CELLMATE TOLD HIM

Mack names a cellmate in Windsor, Ont., jail—Harold Fontaine, a member of the Purple Gang—as having told him two weeks before the kidnaping that it would happen, and as having given him information regarding the shipment of weapons, ammunition and explosives into the prison at Leavenworth, Kan., before the outbreak there.

His deposition is being closely guarded by the State Department and Department of Justice but certain generalities have become known.

He has a record of previous arrest in Boston and is also wanted in Hartford, Ct., where he lived and where he claims to have roomed with Henry "Red" Johnson, Miss Gow's Sweetheart — a claim denied, by the way, by his wife, Mrs. Suzie McKay, now in Hartford.

Mack was convicted of fraud in Canada and sentenced to Windsor jail after he had jumped bail on the larceny case here. While in Windsor he was for seven weeks the cellmate of Fontaine.

BOND COMPANY AIDS

He got out of Windsor on March 9, his deportation was ordered and he was taken to Montreal, where he called for a consular agent and made his deposition.

United States Government authorities could not seek to block his deportation and cause his extradition as a witness but the means to do it were found by Francis C. Mahoney of the local office of Lexington Surety & Indemnity Co.

That company was on his bond when he jumped, and Mahoney immediately asked Montreal authorities to hold Mack for extradition for a criminal offence.

Boston police got an extradition warrant and Mack waived his rights and was brought back, while Department of Justice agents began the check of his story, which, Mahoney said, has been verified in many angles.

Mack says that two weeks before the kidnaping Fontaine told him the Lindbergh baby was going to be "snatched" by the "Purple Gang."

When he read of it in the papers, Mack said he asked Fontaine: "Did you hear about the Lindbergh baby?" and that Fontaine answered, "There wasn't any hitch in it, was there?"

GETS DATES, NAMES

Mack has been quoted as saying that if he could talk with Miss Gow alone she might, because they come from the same town, be able to recall important information she has not given police.

He believes the child is in a "western state."

He said Fontaine told him that he himself procured and shipped into Leavenworth 16 pistols, a submachine gun, 35 sticks of dynamite and 250 pounds of nitroglycerine.

He gave federal agents the dates and details of these shipments from East St. Louis, as given to him by Fontaine, he says, and verification of them is reported to have been made.

Particular credence has been placed in the Leavenworth angle by the federal agents because Fontaine has been under suspicion of complicity in the riot and his extradition has been sought.

He is reported to have unusual political influence in Toronto and $20,000 has been spent already in his behalf to block his extradition.

Fontaine is a native of Cicero, Ill., the gang-breeding ground of the Middle West. He was a small-time racketeer when in 1914 he enlisted in the Canadian Army. He served in France and was discharged in 1916, returning to Canada where he got in trouble and was sentenced to the penetentiary at Kingston.

To obtain his release he volunteered for service at the front again and went overseas until the end of the war. Returning, he entered into racketeering in a big way and became a smuggler of aliens, running them over the border from Canada, using the Detroit river.

He was caught red-handed in this country and, after conviction, sentenced to five or six years at Leavenworth, where, it is believed, he may have plotted the attempted wholesale delivery that aroused the nation last year.

SUBJECT OF KING

The Government has never known how the Leavenworth rioters armed themselves, although Fontaine has been a suspect for a long time and has successfully fought extradition on the grounds of Canadian citizenship, having sworn allegiance to the king when he served in the war.

Two witnesses in the Leavenworth riot went to Windsor in an attempt to identify Fontaine, but failed to do so.

Counsel for Fontaine is said to have inspired the movement resulting in the order for deportation of Mack, who also claims Canadian citizenship, although admitting Scottish birth and illegal entry here.

Mack may be taken back to Windsor to face Fontaine if the federal authorities decide on that course. Mahoney said the indemnity company would provide the bail to permit this if it was guaranteed of Mack's return.

Boston police are skeptical of Macks story and so is his Hartford wife. He has another wife in Scotland, police say.

CHILDREN OF MOVIE STARS GUARDED

Fear that the Lindbergh kidnaping would inspire similar crimes caused the stars to take action.

Jane Bannister, 4, daughter of Ann Harding, has been guarded in the Harding home atop the Hollywood hills for several weeks following a threat to kidnap the child for ransom.

Special watchmen were employed to watch the children of Harold Lloyd, millionaire film actor.

Iron bars were placed over the windows of the nursery in the home of Marlene Dietrich, German actress, and guards were employed to watch Maria Seiber, her small daughter.

Kidnap Threat Writer Hunted

Babylon, N. Y., March 26 (AP)—A window screen cut from its frame, footprints on the ground and an unsigned note in which the would-be kidnaper of Lucretia Butler, two-year-old daughter of H. Chilton Butler, threatened to return were being investigated by police today.

Mrs. Butler discovered the cut screen when she went into the child's room at 10:45 o'clock last night. Police found the note on the ground under the window. While inclined to believe the attempted kidnaping the work of a crank, they are intent upon finding the writer of the note, which read:

"Will be back. Remember warped shutter at Hopewell."

TIPPERARY ALL SET TO REBEL ON BRITAIN

"Kevin Barry Did Not Die for a Slave State!" Cry Indignant Irishmen

Following is one of a series of articles by Linton Wells, staff correspondent of International News Service, who went to Ireland to investigate the critical situation caused by Eamonn De Valera's threat to abolish the oath of allegiance to the British crown.

By LINTON WELLS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Tipperary, Ireland, March 26—"Kevin Barry died for a republic—not a slave state!"

That describes the attitude of this center of Irish terrorist activity whence came the mighty Barry, who was executed in 1916. No county of Ireland has excelled Tipperary in the unending battle for independence.

YOUTHS ARE DRILLED

There is evidence of past Republican acts on every hand—burned and gutted houses, even deserted places marked with those fatal "X's" which mean that a residence had been singled out for execution.

The streets of Tiperary at noon today were filled with townsmen and countrymen, arguing politics betwixt barters. On the green at the edge of the town more than 100 grim-faced youths were being drilled by a thin-lipped superior—the Irish Republican army is preparing for tomorrow's demonstration in commemoration of the Easter Sunday rebellion of 1916.

Civic guardsmen stood by benignly.

In Paddy Ryan's "pub" the sole topic of conversation was the renewed vigor of the Irish independence movement, thanks to Eamonn De Valera, new president of the Free State executive council.

MAY NEED ENERGY

"Sure there ain't a Britisher who can lick me!" observed one son of Erin who had not stinted himself on stimulants, and to prove his point he promptly slammed his drinking companion on the chin.

The ensuing Donnybrook fair was short of anti-climax. Another gentleman pasted the bombastic one and laid him cold upon the floor.

"Save your energy for the British," he remarked as he wiped his hands on the leg of his breeches. "You may need it."

triots will take places at the heads of meetings.

President Eamon De Valera's reply to the British note on the oath of allegiance is "now in preparation," according to a government statement. It is not expected to be made public before next week, at which time the text of the British note also probably will be published.

De Valera Defies British Threats of Trade War

London, March 26 (INS)—Ireland does not fear economic warfare with England, and firmly intends to eliminate the oath of allegiance to the Crown from its constitution, Eamon De Valera, president of the Free State executive council, declared in an interview published in the News-Chronicle today.

The interview was given to Dingle Mackintosh Foot, Liberal member of parliament.

"Surrendering to the threat of an immediate and terrible war would give us at least 10 years of misery," De Valera was quoted as saying.

"In any case, our economic position is far stronger than you profess to believe. We can feed, clothe and shelter our people. In the last resort we buy more from you than you buy from us."

French Fliers Set New World Record

Oran, Algeria, March 26 (AP)—The French fliers, Lucien Bouscoutort and Emil Rossi, broke the world record for sustained flight over a closed circuit today when they had covered 10,600 kilometers and been in the air 76 hours and 43 minutes.

The former record, 10,372 kilometers, was held by Marcel Doret and Joseph Lebrix.

LINDY CONQUERS TERROR TO DIRECT HUNTERS

Norfolk, Va., March 26 (INS)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has won a victory greater than his conquest of the Atlantic by air.

The lanky youngster has conquered the stark terror of a stricken father and is today directing the far-flung search for his kidnaped baby with the cool, impersonal efficiency of a general maneuvering his armies. He has drawn on some deep reserve to become a being of steel, moving with the precision of an automaton.

Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage, who visited the Lindberghs Tuesday night, calls it a "sort of second wind."

Burrage is one of the Norfolk trio acting as agents of the Lindberghs in an effort to recover their baby.

COLD, GRIM FIGHT

He knew the colonel in his hour of greatest triumph when five years ago as captain of the Memphis he brought the flier back from Paris. Tuesday night he saw the same Lindbergh calm under the stress of sorrow. The retired naval officer brought back to the sunny flower garden where he spends most of his time an indelible picture of a Lindbergh who has steeled taut senses to sorrow that he may find a way out of it.

"He is like a great general marshalling his forces," Admiral Burrage said. "From every front come reports that this or that lead is inevitably the right one. He sits there calmly, seeing them all come in, and directs that the line be reinforced here, there, where he thinks best.

"There is a second wind in everything. When sorrow first comes it is a blow. After that, after the first reserve is used up, from somewhere a new lease is secured. A new reserve, second wind.

EVERYBODY IS FOR THEM

"Col. Lindbergh is now the directing head of a great army, seeking to help him in every possible way. He makes the decisions, determines what shall be done and what not done.

"There is not a man in the country who would not give a finger to help Lindbergh. I'd give two fingers.

"There is not a mother in America whose heart does not go out to Mrs. Lindbergh. And she deserves it."

The grizzled, 65-year-old naval officer carefully did not mention Lindbergh's name in specific comments. He talked in a general way of calmness, defined sorrow as a test of character, obviously ruminating.

The condition of the noted singer, who has carried on bravely despite her 70 years, was said not to be serious by Dr. G. F. Hourn, who was called in to treat her. Dr. Hourn, however, said that Mme. Schumann-Heink would have to remain in bed for several days.

Yancey to Fly Expedition of Scientists to Yucatan

Los Angeles, March 26 — Capt. Lewis A. Yancey, transatlantic flier of note, has announced plans for an aerial expedition to Yucatan where he hopes to explore Mayan ruins.

Capt. Yancey

Yancey named the date of the expedition as sometime in next January. The trip will be made in two autogiro planes, he said. Yancey recently completed a preliminary trip through the southern country.

Dr. Frans Blom, of Tulane University, and Prof. Gregory Mason, of the University of Pennsylvania, both archeologists, will join in the trip, Yancey said, adding the tour will be sponsored by Tulane.

Husband Should Be Boss, Says Film Actress

New York, March 26—According to Patsy Ruth Miller, former star of the screen, it is the man who should dominate the home and not, as so many women think, the woman.

Patsy Ruth Miller

Miss Miller, who is the wife of Tay Garnett, film director, made her observation in reference to the Harry Bannister-Ann Harding contemplated divorce.

Miss Miller successfully combined her film career with her marriage career and doesn't hesitate to state that the marriage career is by far the grander one—if the husband dominates.

POWERS FOUND NO 'REGRETS' FOR CRIMES

An Overpowering Urge Forced Him to Kill, but He Admitted He Was Not Crazy

Moundsville, W. Va., March 26 (INS)—Harry F. Powers, Quiet Dell "Bluebeard," spoke from beyond the gallows-arm today in a posthumous confession to the murders of Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke of Massachusetts, and Mrs. Asta Eicher of Illinois and her three children.

In the presence of newspapermen Warden A. C. Scroggins revealed the contents of a "mystery" note scrawled by Powers just before he walked to the scaffold protesting his innocence.

The note was a verification of a previous admission of guilt in the murder for which he paid.

HAD NO REGRETS

Between the lines could be read the psychopathic introspection of Powers as he studied the quirks which led him into strange emotional practices. He said:

"This is to certify that I have given to my medical advisor (Dr. H. J. Haynes who recently announced Pawers had made a full confession in a first-person life story) a true and full written account of my life and that I have described all my deeds. Whether good or bad, in full and that they are true as described.

"At no time during the commitment, or after the commitment, on any of my deeds have I felt any regret or remorse.

"On the other hand I have had a feeling of well-being.

MOODS CHANGING

"I know I am not legally insane, but I know I am not normal. Usually I am kind and affectionate, but at times I have an overpowering urge. At these times I have neither fear nor sympathy.

"I am not this way because I want to be. I must have been born this way.

SUN SERVICES FOR EASTER

By the Associated Press.

Rome rang out its bells today and believers in Christ everywhere rejoiced at the ending of 40 days of sombre symbolic mourning.

The Republican spirit grew active in Ireland and there was trepidation of trouble on the Peace Prince's Day.

California prepared for sunrise services on seashrore and desert and in the cities. A quarter million or more will find room for worship in the Hollywood Bowl, and a living cross of singers will convey Easter's Christian message there.

Winston-Salem, N. C., will awake traditionally to hear roving bands playing Easter chorales and thousands will go to the Old Home Moravian Church to hear "The Lord Is Risen" for the 200th time.

President Hoover will attend sunrise services in Arlington cemetery and later Mrs. Hoover will accompany him to Quaker services in the Washington New Friends Church.

To Attack Record for Racing Motors

Paris, March 26 (INS)—M. Stepp, French inventor of a racing motor car which he claims will travel from 325 to 385 miles per hour, said today he hoped to take his machine to Daytona Beach, Fla., to attempt to beat the 253.97 M. P. H. record recently set by Sir Malcolm Campbell, British driver.

The inventor said the car's initial try-out was successful. It is over 30 feet long, weighs about 5500 pounds, and is steadied by a tail-fin.

Government Sues 2 Big Corporations

Gov. Ely's Easter Message Calls for Faith Renewal

Gov. Ely today issued the following Easter message to the people of Massachusetts:

"No annually recurring event is fraught with as sacred meaning as is Easter Day observance. Here culminates all our hope; here the spiritual transcends the material; here wells up in every human heart the aspiration for a renewal of life from its deepest sources. Just as the warming rays of the returning sun give proof that nature, as revealed in plant and tree, is again reaching up for new light and sustenance, so does the holy observance of Easter Day show that man has within him a deep, spiritual longing that cannot be satisfied by bread alone.

"Easter is the expression of man's spiritual nature, and a manifestation of his longing for the higher things of this life and for the life that is to be. This beautiful harmony between man and nature in the springtime of the year gives a sacredness and significance to Easter Day that attach themselves to no other observance.

"In an age of rapidly expanding knowledge and scientific research; at a time when practical efficiency seems to measure success, it is reassuring to see the ever-increasing value of this age-old celebration of the resurrection of life and the promise of immortality. We seem to find in Easter Day the realization of the promise of the Master of Men, who said, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."

"Washington on his knees at Valley Forge in the darkest hour of the struggle for national independence is a symbol of our faith as a nation in a Divine Providence that ruleth over all things.

"May this example of the reliance of the Father of His Country upon the Father of us all guide and strengthen us in the troubled times through which we are now passing.

"May Washington's faith renew our faith in the God of Nations, and so lift us above the strife that separates to a higher appreciation of the brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God."

4 RAIL WORKERS SLAIN FOR JOBS

Memphis, Tenn., March 26 (AP)—A series of mysterious attacks in which four men were killed brought G. E. Patterson, vice-president of th eIllinois Central Railroad, to Memphis today to investigate what he described as "a reign of terror" among the road's Negro employes.

Al lof the attacks occurred in Mississippi. In addition to the four slain, several Negroes have been wounded.

Patterson said the reason for the assaults had not been dettrmined, although it had been suggested in soma quarters that they were executed in a deliberate plan of intimidation aimed at driving Negroes from their jobs to afford opportunities for unemployed white men.

Cross Boomed for Vice-Presidency

Hartford, Ct., March 26 (AP)—Leaders of the "Old Guard" faction of the Democratic party said today they would push the "favorite son" candidacy of Governor Wilbur L. Cross for the presidential nomination in the hope of making him an active contender for the vice-presidency.

The tax on that day amounted to $1,522,225, as compared with $3,280,517 a year ago. For the fiscal year receipts amounted to $846,985,409, as compared with $1,498,696,401 for the same period of the previous year.

Curley Sees Building Costs Cut 40 P. C.

A 40 per cent reduction in building construction costs was claimed yesterday by Mayor Curley in awarding the contract for the construction of a $1,000,000 addition to the new Public Latin school building in the Fenway for a price of $672,000.

"Now is the time to build," advised the mayor.

The contract was awarded to the John Bowen Co., Inc., the lowest of 14 bidders.

Implied threat of abduction was made in a demand for $1500 sent to Alice Roosevelt Longworth. Her daughter, Paulina, was the object of the kidnaping threat.

Elaine and Mary Lee Johnson, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. J. Seward Johnson, Highland Park, N. J., are still guarded although kidnaping suspect has been arrested.

Many reports of kidnaping threats have been received since the son of Charles A. Lindbergh was taken from his home at Hopewell, N. J., almost a month ago.

In Washington, Ben Lyon and his wife, Bebe Daniels, received threat to kidnap their child, Barbara. The movie couple have taken precautious to protect her.

KENTUCKY BANS MORE STUDENTS

Fonde, Ky., March 26 (AP)—A bus full of students attempting to slip into Kentucky at this border town was halted by County Attorney Walter B. Smith's "border patrol" today.

Mr. Smith, who had ejected a group last night after examining them at Middlesboro, hastened here with other officers on a tip from Tennessee authorities. When the bus appeared he took th egroup in charge and ordered them taken to Middlesboro.

He said the students appeared to be another section of the collegians who are trying to investigate the coal fields' labor controversy, and that a few of those ejected last night were in the bus.

Washington, March 26 (AP)—The Justice Department today answered a request for protection of college students studying mining conditions in Kentucky with the statement that it is a matter to be handled by the states.

"The Federal Government has nothing to do with the rights and privilegt of a citizen of one state in a second state," Mitchell said.

HUM HELPS GET STRUM FREE

Even in court, Hum and Strum are together—and today in Malden court the famous, even if tiny, radio team, scored a success, but without their ukuleles.

Strum, who is Thomas C. Currier of 127 Park st., Dorchester, was up on charges of drunken driving on the night of March 20, but he was found not guilty after a parade of witnesses had proved erroneous the accusation of Patrolman Binford.

Hum, who is Max Zides of 851 Harrison ave., South End, testified that he had gone all through school with Strum and had been associated with him ever since, and that neither drank.

Other witnesses testified they had not seen Currier drinking before he left the Calumet Club in Winchester, where they had entertained that night.

And Dr. Joseph J. Foley of Dorchester testified that he had prescribed for Currier, to ward off tonsilitis, a medicine which would leave a breath odor similar to that described by the policeman.

NEW KIDNAPING THREAT BARED

Washington, March 25—A new threatening letter from extortionists plotting to kidnap the son of Sir Willmot Lewis and the daughter of Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth has been received by Sir Willmot today.

Police declined to make it public, but placed a guard about both homes. The guard remained at the Longworth home although it was reported that Mrs. Longworth and her daughter Paulina have left Washington, presumably for New York.

In the meantime the police claim to have discovered a clue. Police have found in the effects of a service man paper similar to that on which the two threatening letters were written. The marine corps listed as a deserter Sergeant C. W. Carper who is wanted for questioning, it was said.

The typewriter on which the letters were written has been found in a down-town office building, it was stated, and police have learned the identity of a man who wrote several notes on it.

SOAKED-UP RUM CONVICTS HER

A liquor-soaked handkerchief, that had been kept in an air-tight container since March 12, convicted Mrs. Benvissuta Gomes, 36, of Morris st., East Boston, today in East Boston Court on a charge of keeping and exposing.

She appealed a fine of $150 and sentence of one month, and was held in $300 for Superior Court.

On March 12, Sergt. William J. Cripps and Special Officer Walter R. Russell raided Mrs. Gomes' home, it is charged, and found her with two pints in her hands.

She threw one pint out of a window and drained the other over the sill, they said, but they ran downstairs, soaked a handkerchief and placed it in the container.

TRIES TO DIE 'AS CHRIST DID'

Providence, March 26—Because she wanted to die "as Christ died on Good Friday," Jennie Zabilsky, 24, of Julian st., stabbed her hands, feet and breast today in the bedroom of her home.

Her name is on the danger list in Rhode Island Hospital.

Police Capt. James Cusick and a parish priest answered the call of the parents after they found their daughter nearly unconscious.

"I wanted to die as Christ died on Good Friday," the girl said before she became unconscious.

Two notes to girl chums were destroyed by the girl's parents. They would not reveal the contents.

Walter Leng asked $10,000 from Oren Coleman, superintendent of the Pontiac, Ill., State Reformatory, charging that Coleman "brushed off the seat of my trous- with his boot heel."

Coleman said he did kick him, but he was only joking.

The jury argued about it for 24 hours and then quit.

BALMY BREEZE TO FADE BEFORE SHOWERS

Colder Tonight and Tomorrow After Today's First Real Rustle of Spring

The experts had produced a balmy spring day, had cajoled the mercury above 60 and all the sons of Dame Boston were getting ready their Easter finery.

COLDER, MAYBE RAIN

"We are lost," the experts shouted as they staggered from their maps.

For all signs point to a colder night and Sunday, with probably light showers and the wind shifting into the northwest.

"But please tell them it might be worse," the experts said, their faces drawn and haggard.

"A few clouds, a little rain and a nipping wind don't have to spoil that Easter parade. And there's no real out-and-out storm this side of Quebec."

The spring weather filled the stores today and Easter business was at a high level despite the early date.

WARMEST SINCE JAN. 15

This was by no means the mildest March 26 on record. Ten years ago today the mercury reached 79. But today was the warmest day since Jan. 15, when the rare midwinter mark of 65 was set.

Lent, which ended at noon today, after 40 days of self-sacrifice on the part of thousands of Bostonians and special religious services, will be climaxed by elaborate Easter Sunday services in the churches.

In at least a score of churches special choirs will render Easter hymns which have had long weeks of preparation. Pastors in all churches will preach sermons prepared for the purpose of spreading Easter spirit.

DEDHAM EX-WIFE DIES ON TRAIN

Mrs. Ruth Woolson Rogers, divorced wife of Dudley T. Rogers, former Dedham and Dartmouth College athlete, was found dead in a train compartment between Munich and Salzburg, Germany, according to an International News Service dispatch from Berlin today.

Since her divorce in Paris from Rogers in 1927 Mrs. Rogers had made her home there.

Salzburg hospital doctors pronounced death due to a heart seizure.

Her father, W. T. Woolson, wealthy head of a Springfield, Vt., manufacturing concern, was notified by Salzburg authorities, but had no more particulars, he said.

The couple were married in Springfield, Vt., in June, 1917, two years after Rogers was graduated from Dartmouth. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Rogers of Village ave., Dedham, but lately has been identified with the automobile trade in New York.

According to Dedham friends, Mrs. Rogers was en route to Austria to visit a schoolmate when death overtook her. She was in America last December.

She was friendly with a sister of her divorced husband, Mrs. William Hill, famous as the "fudge cake girl" when wooed by Hill in her Wellesley tea room.

Boy Plunges to Death Off New Haven Rock

New Haven, Ct., March 26 (INS)—A ledge gave way half way up the side of West Rock today and John W. Patterson, 15, plunged 100 feet to his death.

The boy, son of John W. Patterson, Sr., superintendent of a rubber company here, had cleared from the top of the sheer cliff, apparently as a stunt, and became trapped on the ledge. Two years ago, Raymond Spang, maniac Ansonia ex-service man, hurled his wife, four children and himself from the rock.

Skull Fractured in Street Battle

Andrew Balkin, 18, of West Fourth st., South Boston, was found unconscious on Gustin st. today, with a fractured skull. His name is on the danger list at City Hospital. Police believe he was beaten by strangers with whom he had an argument.

Mrs. Stella Kalinsky of Gustin st. found Balkin near her home after she heard groans.

Another Milton young son, but old enough to know better, is causing a ripple in the social sea by playing on the sands of time with one of the world's most fascinating comedians . . . none other than the beautiful Lady Peale. No doubt "Peales of Laughter" is getting quite a kick out of a member of one of Boston's oldest familes daring to walk where English Earls would fear to tread. The experience will probably benefit him more than his last year at Harvard . . .

Topics for Fathers and Mothers

THESE PROBLEM PARENTS ARE STILL TRYING TO find out what to tell their children . . . invitations are out to the Parents' Institute at the Hotel Bradford on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. Tuesday is going to be FATHERS' Day and Wednesday is MOTHERS' Day . . . can you bear it? There will be a luncheon on both days and round table talks. Mrs. Charles G. Loring will be hostess at 8 p. m. on one of the evenings when "Parents' Responsibility for Child to Child Relationship" will be discussed. We wonder how much they all remember of their OWN relationship to other children when they were very young . . . it is quite important. We wonder if children of today look up naughty words in the dictionary as we used to do . . . or does the parents' institute take care of all that . . .

Eager to Know

WE HAVE THREE DAUGHTERS and have tried for 12 years to learn what they think and talk about when they are together or with their playmates . . . we haven't found out yet. If we ever do we will put it in this column to assist the problem parents . . . but somehow we feel sure we never will. When you want to know what children think about, just recollect back about 40 years . . . we imagine it will be quite as accurate as a book on the psychology of the child.

On Committee

WE ARE ALL OF A TWITTER to know what will be told to the Fathers on Tuesday that the Mothers on Wednesday must not hear. Storrow, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Knox Sherrill, Dr. and Mrs. George Bigelow, Dr. and Mrs. Richard M. Smith, who are on the committee.

HARVARD CLASS IN TRANSFER

Harvard Engineering School may be without a sophomore class next year because of the new House Plan, pet project of President A. Lawrence Lowell.

Apparently tired of dormitory life, nearly the entire class of 30 indicated in a recent survey that they would apply for enrollment under the Faculty of Arts and Sciences next year. In this way they may be admitted to quarters in the college under the House Plan.

"I have already received a number of petitions and I believe the entire resident group of this year's freshman class will apply for transfer to the college," Dean Clifford of the Engineering school said.

"It is a great advantage for men taking a course in all engineering sciences to have a background of general college experience," he added in giving his approval to the plan.

REP. SIROVICH IN COLLAPSE

Washington, March 26 (AP)—The critic of critics, Representative Sirovich of New York, is seriously ill with a kidney ailment which brought about his collapse, and he may have to undergo an operation.

The indefatigible little chairman of the House Patents Committee recently lambasted dramatic critics of the big cities, accusing them of killing the legitimate theater through reckless and unfair criticism of the stage's best offerings. It was all part of his campaign to put across a new copyright bill.

For hours yesterday he sat in the House waiting a chance to speak on the bill to tax 2.75 beer. He couldn't get his word in, so he walked back to his rooms in the House office building. There he collapsed.

LELAND, AUTO PIONEER, DIES

Detroit, March 26 (INS)—Henry Martyn Leland, 89, pioneer automobile and airplane manufacturer, died in Grace Hospital here today after a month's illness. His son and daughter were at his bedside.

Death of Mr. Leland closed an outstanding civic and business career of more than half a century in Detroit. He ended his association with the auto industry 10 years ago when the Lincoln Automobile Company, which he founded, was taken over by Henry Ford.

Member of an early New England family, Leland was apprenticed at the age of 16 in the Crompton Loom Works, in Worcester. He came to Detroit in 1890.

As the automobile industry developed, he organized the Cadillac Automobile Co. in 1902 and became its president with his son, Wilfred C. Leland, vice-president, in 1908.

The war brought Leland into the manufacture of airplane motors on a large scale at the Lincoln plant, to which Leland had turned all his efforts at the time.

He was a profound admirer of Abraham Lincoln and possessed one of the most complete collection of works on Lincoln in the state.

In 1865 he married Miss Ellen R. Hull, daughter of Elias Hull, of Milbury, Mass. Mrs. Leland died in 1914. There were three children, Mrs. Angus C. Woodbridge, and Wilfred Chester Leland, of Detroit, and Miriam Leland, deceased.

BOOKS—and a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

A week before Mrs. Fiske died, the manuscript of the first chapter of her autobiography, called "Stage-Child," reached the editors of Good Housekeeping, and it did seem as if the great actress would recover from her illness and be able to go on with her fascinating reminiscences. But death came suddenly, and so this is all that we have of her story.

The editors tore apart their April issue, then on the press, in order to include this initial—and only—installment, and there is something tragic in that last paragraph, not quite finished, trailing off with the phrase, "and over me bright star-dust seemed drifting, drifting . . ."

But everyone should read these final words which Mrs. Fiske wrote with her own hand. No ghost-writer for her! Editors had pursued her for many years to tell of her rich life on the stage. But she always modestly held off. "Some day," she would say to them; "perhaps."

Finally, however, Mr. Bigelow and Mr. McKeogh induced her to put pen to paper; and she was glad to do it for a magazine, the readers of which had voted for her in a recent poll, giving her an overwhelming majority as our outstanding actress, and including her within the magic ring of 10 who were considered the greatest women of America.

Her portrait had been painted by Leon Gordon, and she was deeply touched at the tribute accorded her. So she set to work, with that indomitable will of hers, determined to tell her story truthfully and simply, if, as she had discovered, she had so large a following among readers in all parts of the country.

It is a pity that this history could not be finished. For Mrs. Fiske had much to say, and she could have conjured up the flavor and feeling of an elder day, when actors went "trouping," and the road which she loved, true gypsy that she was, held glamour and wonder for her.

She was practically born in the theater, and her first memories are of a property trunk in which, as an infant, she slept in her mother's dressing room. At first, a champagne crate was large enough to contain her small body. She "went on" before she could talk; and later she was to be widely known as a singing soubrette under the name of Minnie Maddern. She sparkled in a dire play written especially for her, called "Fogg's Ferry," and a young newspaper man was sent to review it. Afterwards, this same reporter was to be her husband, Harrison Gray Fiske.

She tells of that first play with a sly humor:

"The tremendous scene in 'Fogg's Ferry' occurred when the romantic hero was sailing down the Mississippi in a steamboat. The scheming villain had surreptitiously placed a bomb in the channel. But the heroine—myself—miraculously discovered this vile trick, fired a bullet from the shore, exploded the bomb, and saved the steamboat. In full sight of the audience the rescued vessel moved proudly on, lights blazing, music playing, the hero unscathed, and the noble girlish heroine fainting on the shore. Chills and thrills!"

Ah! if we could see that shabby scenery now, used as we are to the glories of the talkies!

Yes, it is a pity that there is to be no continuation of the great Mrs. Fiske's memories. This one teasing chapter is all that we shall ever be able to read.

Spring being well on the way—here, in fact—there is nothing I like to do more than to dip into such a garden book as has been issued by William E. Rudge entitled "Gardens and Gardening." One feels like the dear old lady who, when hungry, got out Mrs. Rorer's Cook Book, and smacked her lips over the delectable recipes. Whether one actually goes in for gardening or not, such a volume makes fascinating reading; and the urge comes to own a country place of one's own, no matter how small, and see what one might be able to accomplish in the way of raising flowers.

There are beautiful photographs of rock gardens and fountains, shrubbery and terraces, until one aches to leave the iron city and get out into the open spaces. But even the city dweller can find ways of creating a miniature garden in his backyard or on his roof, if he will study the chapters which deal with such cases. Londoners have done it, and there is a growing movement in that direction in all large cities in our own country.

It took us a long time, in New York, to realize the value of our waterfronts; and now districts like Sutton pl. and Beekman pl. have blossomed into beauty, with flagged paths leading right down to the East River. I know one penthouse that contains a lawn, where croquet is played on summer days, and all sorts of plants and flowers gladden the eye. Why we were so many years in utilizing our rooftops remains one of the mysteries. "The lure of green things growing" captures us all in these first warm spring days. If we can't indulge in a garden of our own, the next best thing is to read of others' airy spaces, and gaze longingly at their pictured beauty in a book like this.

Father Coughlin's Messages

THE "SHEPHERD OF THE AIR"

There is no more intent listener to the radio sermons of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin each Sunday afternoon than his mother, Mrs. Thomas J. Coughlin. She spends most of each Sunday at Royal Oak, Mich. Don't forget to start the first installment of Father Cough-

MOTHER OF FAMED PASTOR

lin's talks to women on Monday in the Boston Evening American. For the first time he talks to a newspaperwoman—Miss Ruth Mugglebee. She tells you his stand on love—marriage — courtship — home. Don't fail to read the first interview. Monday is the day.

Plans to Make His Shrine World's Most Beautiful

By ALAN FRAZER

Copyright, 1932, by the Boston Evening American.

"Men may be renowned for their intelligence and inventiveness—but women will always be known for their motherliness—a word which compounds all the beautiful qualities that enter into the vocabulary of men."—FR. COUGHLIN.

When Easter is gone, the world relinquishes Fr. Coughlin to his mother.

The period of his broadcasting each year covers approximately six months, September to Easter, and she sees little of him, despite the fact that few nights pass without his appearance for supper at his parents' home in Detroit.

DUTIES NUMEROUS

His work, his mail and the thousand-and-one other demands on his time and energy occupy him morning, noon and night, and even his parishioners see less of him than they would like, although he is there to say mass each Sunday.

He doesn't get home at all on Sundays. After the masses, in which he alternates with his assistant pastor, are over, he sits down to a meal prepared by his mother at Royal Oak, and, as many of his admirers learned long ago, it must be chicken. Sunday without chicken is not to be dreamed of in the Coughlin household.

After dinner he takes a walk with his Great Dane, Pal. Next he conducts his Children's Hour, and then he expends his prodigious energy in his sermon.

LIKES SOLITUDE

Then, if the weather permits, another walk with his dog, accompanied often by a friend or parishioner. Father Coughlin likes to be alone in these walks—alone, except for "Pal"—but he doesn't say so if someone swings into step beside him. Of all his rare moments of silence, most of them are in these late Sunday afternoon strolls.

A light supper follows. He sees his mother and father off for Detroit and his busiest day is done, except for a final visit to the church and the evening's meditation.

When the months of broadcasting come to a close, the dynamic little pastor tries to get as much recreation as possible. Yet his busy season is hardly over before summer rushes upon him with its stream of tourists visiting the famous Shrine of the Little Flower. Every one of them—man, woman and child—wants to see him, and it is not in his heart to refuse, unless necessity compels it.

Now that Crucifixion Tower, built out of contributions from his widespread flock, is completed, he feels a special thrill of satisfaction, insofar as his priestly soul will permit, when visitors come from afar to view the marble shaft which many of them have had a hand in rearing aloft.

Father Coughlin looks ahead to a time when the whole edifice, the new church with the tower as its central feature, will be finished. When the shrine at Royal Oak will be one of the most beautiful in the world.

The American Lourdes, perhaps. Who knows?

Its pastor envisions for it a glorious future.

What the future holds for him, he knows as little as anybody.

He does not expect to continue for many years as now. A servant of the church he is, when his orders come, he will willingly obey. Willingly, although with perhaps a pang of human regret for the great work he leaves behind.

READY FOR STRUGGLE

He does hope, however, for a few more years of broadcasting. With America struggling through such a trying period, he wants to give of himself to help. To help, please God, in the solution of the problems of his nation. The problems of his people.

It may be the years to come have greater fame in store for him. He doesn't think of that. It may be the future has greater obstacles to test anew his mettle. He is ready for those. It may be that sadness and sorrow await him, for who is there that escapes these? His faith in immortality will see him through.

Death awaits him, and he will die remembered.

But whether or not his name will go ringing down the ages, he cares not, so long as he does his duty to the limit of his great capacity, day by day. So long as he does his duty and serves his people and his God.

TRIBUTE TO WOMEN

There he sits tonight in his study, smoking an occasional cigarette, planning how he will serve on the morrow.

There in another house, his father sits, beaming with pride when mention of his first-born is made.

There his mother sits, thanking God when she thinks of her worthy son. As she did when he said his first mass long ago. As she did in those days when he stood in the pulpit at St. Leo's and demonstrated the power of his intellect, the forceful beauty of his soul. As she did when to her came the realization that America loved the man she will always call her boy. As she did when from his lips, over the ether waves, came that praise of women, that praise of motherhood:

"May I recall the plight of womanhood in the days of Augustus Caesar at Rome, or in the reign of the majestic Pericles at Athens? Woman was always a chattel, always a thing.

"Not only was she denied the right of citizenship, but she was bought and traded as a man would buy or sell a horse.

"Nevertheless, it was her hand which was supposed to rock the cradle. It was her breast that was supposed to feed the future citizen.

"Those were the times when men began to deify their lusts and their passions under the name of a Venus or an Aphrodite.

"Those were the days when the little lamp of civilization saw its sickly flame extinguished until the so-called erudite, both at Rome and Athens, out-barbarized the Goth, the Vandal and the Tartar in his cruelty, in his immorality.

"Not until Mary, the Immaculate Virgin Mother, came upon the horizon of history did the noble soul of womankind begin to cast its warmth and benediction upon the works and destinies of mankind.

"Men may boast of their valor and courage. But the Christian woman must be praised for her love and sacrifice.

"Men may be renowned for their intelligence and inventiveness, but women will always be known for their motherliness—a word which compounds all the beautiful qualities that enter into the vocabulary of men."

This concludes the story of Father Coughlin, his works and messages.

Fr. Coughlin's Talks to the Women of America—an exclusive feature, the first interviews with the famous radio priest by a woman writer, begin in Monday's Boston Evening American.

Father Coughlin

By Martin W. O'Connell, Dover, N. H.

Here is no worshipper of idols vain,
But Jesus Christ, and Jesus Christ alone;
Believing fully through none other name
May those who sin atone.

No bigot he—ah, no, much more than that,
He preaches as his Master bids him to;
Through him we hear but echoes of another voice,
Instructing him to preach and act and do.

That gallant company of popes
Who lived a thousand years ago,
Were not more zealous than this priest
To strike and land a telling blow!

STORM RAGES ON WOMAN G. O. P. MEMBER

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

While Democratic chiefs were marking time today and priming their guns for a sizzling campaign, political observers turned their eyes toward G. O. P. difficulties, in which Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer and Mrs. Frank Row Batchelder are the storm-center.

Friends of Mrs. Batchelder now claim she has 21 of the 24 delegates lined up to vote her in as national committeewoman from Massachusetts, in place of Mrs. Thayer.

Mrs. Batchelder, who lives in Worcester, is vice-chairman of the Republican state committee. If the slate of delegates are disposed as her friends say, she will, of course, be an easy winner in the effort to supplant Mrs. Thayer.

On the other hand, friends of Mrs. Thayer, a resident of Lancaster, deny the claims of her opponents and likewise deny that when elected four years ago she stated she would only serve one term.

REAL FIGHT STARTS

Mayor Curley, if his cold permits, will speak over the radio at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon from station WNAC and no doubt will fire the opening guns in the start of the real fight between the Roosevelt and Smith supporters—now that filing of slates, withdrawals, substitutions and other preliminaries are done with.

He is also scheduled to appear at a concert in the Hotel Touraine, where the Roosevelt-for-President women's headquarters are situated.

Sen. Walsh, one of the slate pledged to Smith, is in Clinton but will leave for Washington tomorrow night.

Asked today if he had any appointment with Chairman Donahue to discuss the substitution of another person for Dr. Helen I. McGillicuddy, who withdrew, he said:

TELLS WHY SHE QUIT

"I have no appointment with Mr. Donahue and I am out of touch with local matters on account of my duties in Washington."

Speculation as to the motive of Dr. McGillicuddy for withdrawing was ended when she made a frank statement that as a past high official of a certain organization it was her desire to prevent that organization from being involved in any political controversy.

"I have not changed politically," she declared. "I am still with Governor Smith and believe he has the right to have his name presented before the convention."

In coming to her decision, Dr. McGillicuddy expressed keen disappointment over losing the chance to go to the convention. Eight years ago she made the same sacrifice. At that time she was one of the high officers in the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters.

Chairman Frank J. Donahue, who has until next Tuesday to fill the vacancy, said he has not yet decided upon who would replace Dr. McGillicuddy as a delegate-at-large.

Nine last minute changes were made by the Roosevelt slate makers. Prime Robichaud of Gardner counsellor of L'Union Saint Jean Baptiste D'Amerique, replaced J. C. Joseph Flamand, French consul agent at Boston; Joseph Hanken of Revere was substituted for Hale Power of Boston and Mathew P. Maney of Lawrence went in in place of Dr. Frederick L. Good of Brookline.

The other Roosevelt substitutions were Arthur W. Heidke of Boston for Julia O'Connor Parker of Boston, Mabel R. Worthy of Boston for Julian D. Rainey of Boston, M. Grace Barry of Malden for Edmund L. Dolan of Boston.

Former Governor Alfred E. Smith apparently has decided against coming here to speak on behalf of candidates pledged to him, his political aids said today. They based their conviction on the fact Governor Ely, who was expected to extend the invitation, called on Smith, but did not discuss Smith's trip.

Maj.-Gen. Edwards' Possesions Sold

Personal possessions of the late Maj.-Gen. Clarence B. Edwards, wartime commander of the Yankee Division, and Mrs. Edwards, were sold at auction today at the Edwards estate, "Dunroving," in Westwood.

The sale included even the general's dress boots and the trunks and bags that traveled with him over the face of the globe during his adventuruous army career.

Amory Estate to Trinity Church

FIRE MENACES ISLE HOSPITAL

Patients and attendants at Long Island Hospital were given a scare today when a grass fire, fanned by a high wind, swept across the island, missing the administration building and other structures by only a few feet.

The smoky fire, believed to have been started by a cigarette, could be seen from all over the harbor and was noted from the deck of a steamer which had left a short time before for Boston, carrying 40 men employes at the hospital, coming uptown for shore leave.

This boat put back to the island and the 40 men delayed their leave temporarily to aid in battling the fire.

When the fire alarm was sounded, the crew of Engine 38, Congress st., rushed to Engine 44, one of the fireboats, and were taken down the harbor to the island, where they assisted in quelling the blaze.

During the fire, which at one time approached within 20 feet of the administration building, patients and elderly inmates watched the spectacle from the windows.

K. C. PLANS BIG ANNIVERSARY

New Haven, March 26 (AP)—The 50th anniversary of the founding of the Knights of Columbus will be observed Tuesday night. The order started in this city as a social body with insurance benefits for Catholic men.

A charter was granted by the Connecticut Legislature March 29, 1882, the first to clothe a corporation in this state with power to function nationally. Today, the order has over 2000 councils with more than 600,000 members.

Rev. John McGivney, brother of the late Rev. Michael McGivney, one of the founders, will be a guest at the Bridgeport celebration. The Rev. Fr. McGivney is national chaplain of the order.

A speech by Supreme Knight Martin Carmody Tuesday night over a nation-wide radio hookup will feature the national observance.

Radiator Alcohol "Alibi" Frees Driver

A plea that an alcoholic odor was from a punctured radiator won freedom in Somerville court today for Robert Whittemore, 26, of Howard st., Newton, charged with drunken driving.

Whittemore was arrested Wednesday night after his car was in collision with the machine of Hamilton F. Brown of Boston ave., Somerville. His plea was bolstered by testimony of Roy C. Hutchins of the Metropolitan police, who said he did not detect alcohol on Whittemore's breath.

Used Burglar Tools 'to Pick Teeth With'

Heyman Weinberg, 42, who police say has served sentences in various cities, was held in $5000 for Superior Court today by Judge Duff, after arraignment on charges of having burglar tools.

Weinberg admitted possessing the tools, but said he used them to "pick his teeth with." He asked probation, but it was shown he was recently released from the Philadelphia House of Correction.

Hoover to Attend Sunrise Service

Washington, March 26 (AP)—President Hoover intends to begin his observance of Easter Sunday very early tomorrow by attending a sunrise service in Arlington National Cemetery.

The Chief Executive was invited to the service by the local organization of Knights Templar. Later, he and Mrs. Hoover will attend Quaker services at the New Friends Church.

YOUTHS HELD FOR 3 BREAKS

Two 16-year-old youths, charged with attempted breaks in a gas station, a sub-postoffice and a chain store, were captured at gunpoint in Cambridge today.

The two, who gave their names as John E. Glynn, Jr., of Oak st., Somerville, and James J. Lyons of Baldwin st., Cambridge, eluded capture twice, police said, before Patrolman Frank Andrews arrested them near a gas station at Columbia st. and Webster ave.

Patrolman William Gormley identified them as the same pair at whom he fired a shot during a chase from the rear of a sub postoffice at Oak and Cambridge sts.

They were also charged as the same two who fled a Prospect st. chain store a short time later. They were held for juvenile court.

GOBIN'S DEATH SHOOTING TOLD

New Bedford, March 26 (AP)—The State's case against Roland G. Bousquet, Norton grocery clerk accused of slaying Patrolman Edward E. Gobin of Attleboro, was near completion when his trial was resumed today.

Patrolman Lawrence R. Johnson, Gobin's companion on the night of the shooting, was the first witness called today.

Johnson, who was shot through the shoulder at the time Gobin was fatally wounded, told the jury of how he and Gobin had placed Bousquet in a rear seat in the police automobile after arresting him as a suspected "Peeping Tom."

As they prepared to drive away, Johnson said, Bousquet fired.

Hundreds Wait in Vain for Big Blast

HUNT FUGITIVE AS ELSMORE ACCOMPLICE

Police today sought the headquarters of a secret cult with whose members the Elsmore hold-up gang is reported to have mingled in revels in the Back Bay.

Revelation of the cult, whose members were said to have cavorted undraped in the Fenway in early morning hours, came from Mrs. Irene Fore, who was with Elsmore when he was shot Tuesday.

Joseph Lawrence, alias Hopping, Elsmore's aide, who was betrayed by a letter found in the gang leader's pocket, died at City Hospital last night.

Lawrence passed away in the arms of Rose Bornstein, of Revere, said by police to be the wife of Louis "Boston Kitty" Glass, drug pedlar and gangster.

An emergency operation performed to save his life proved fruitless. During the afternoon Lawrence had fallen from his cot and a heavy weight, secured to his legs, had fallen on top of him.

Declaring their belief that he is another member of the Elsmore-Hopping gang, police today sent out over the teletype a request to pick up George Gilbert, 34, who escaped from Norfolk prison camp at the same time that Hopping escaped.

Gilbert was serving time for the kidnaping of Yossell Sherman, a gambler. The refugee is 34 years old, weighs 175 pounds, is 5 feet 11 inches tall, of dark complexion, and has blue eyes and black, curly hair.

Lawrence, police revealed, was the hijacker who planned and carried out the robbery of a load of liquor from a well known Boston gang leader which resulted in the slaying of Frank "Gustin" Wallace and Bernard Walsh, his aid, just before Christmas.

ROADHOUSE MAN BUYS 18 AUTOS

White Plains, N. Y., March 26 (AP)—Louis Pope, arrested at Stamford, Ct., in conection with the seizure yesterday of alleged liquor valued at $250,000, is by common repute the owner of controlling interest in more than a dozen roadhouses and night resorts in Westchester County.

He lives in the largest mansion in the exclusive Gedney Farm residential section of White Plains and conducts a real estate office in the city.

Young Extortionist Neatly Trapped by Hotel Woman

Chicago, March 26 (AP)—A good job being what it is, Mrs. Mary Weir was interested when some one called her on the telephone to say that if she wished to keep her position as a hotel manager she would meet the speaker with an envelope containing $50.

She was on time last night at the designated place and handed her envelope to a negro youth, who identified himself as Roy Archie. Roy opened the envelope and saw a note. It read:

"Those two men behind you are detectives."

MAN SEIZED IN MEYER MANSION

An alleged burglar who apparently had no suspicion the mansion was equipped with an elaborate burglar alarm system, was captured under a bed in the Hamilton home of Mrs. George von L. Meyer, widow of the former Secretary of the Navy.

The man, who gave his name as Henry Walton, 35, with no home, was arraigned in Salem and held in $2000 for the Grand Jury.

Leonard Bond, caretaker of the Meyer estate, was awakened early today by the ringing of the burglar alarm in his cottage, and he telephoned Hamilton police and the Topsfield State barracks.

Trooper Ford of the State troopers was sent to the estate, and Chief Arthur Southwick and Patrolman Edward Fredericks of the Hamilton police rushed to the scene.

The investigators found a shutter removed from the rear of the mansion, which is closed while Mrs. Meyer is traveling abroad, and discovered a window broken.

They found that the house had been ransacked, and eventually they discovered Walton hiding under a bed. He was captured at gunpoint but insisted to police that he was looking for a place to sleep.

In the past few years there have been a number of attempts at burglary in the Meyer home, and in October, 1929, two men were captured in the house by Chief Southwick and a squad.

CRISP MAY BOLT 'TARIFF-LIKE TAX BILL'

Washington, March 6 (AP)—A drive which placed a tax of ten cents a hundred pounds on imports of coal and coke in the new tax bill today brought a declaration to the House from Acting Chairman Crisp of the ways and means committee that if Democrats continued to write tariffs into the measure he would vote against it.

Crisp, who directed the formulation of the measure, opposed the amendment which was put forward by Representative Boland (D.) Pennsylvania. He said he was opposed also to the oil imports tax but that he had agreed to it because the revenue was needed.

After adoption of the coal amendmen, he walked into the well of the House chamber and said:

"This is a say day to me."

He said he had faced the criticism of the House in proposing a bill to balance the budget, and added:

"Now I am seeing my party destroy itself by putting into the bill higher tariff rates than the Republicans ever adopted."

Advocates of the Boland amendment argued that foreign coal was being brought into this country in competition with domestic coal.

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

Easter Joys!

Easter will be so sunny
  I'll clap my hands in glee
If just an Easter bunny
  Comes parcel-post to me.

A fuzzy little chappie
  All sleek and fat and white
To cheer a man who's sought a job
  With all his main and might.

First I shall try to recollect
  Thanksgivings once I knew:
And when that's over, I expect,
  I'll have a rabbit-stew.
—The Sad Funny Man.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: It's taken for granted that you cannot stop a woman from talking . . . But who wants to stop a woman from talking when she's good at it? . . . When it's the Queen of the Night Clubs, Texas Guinan, the world's cleverest chatterbox, who has taken time out from her rehearsals at the Cocoanut Grove—preparatory for her opening there Monday night—to write our column for today . . . So, Readers, give Texas a great big ear!)

A Night-Club Hostess Goes Columnist for a Day

Strange as it may seem, I received my first stage experience in Boston . . . I made my very first "kick" on the stage of the Majestic Theater in this city . . . And I have been "kicking" ever since . . . The show was Reginald de Koven's grand operetta, "The Snow Man" . . . How long ago??? . . . It was in the year of nineteen-hundred-and-none-of-your-business . . . Am I too fresh? . . . Those were the days when I helped to saddle Paul Revere's horse, and held the lantern in the old North Church.

My first starring engagement was in Boston . . . "The Passing Show of 1912" . . . The critics gave me such glowing notices that I had 20,000 postal cards reprinted of those reviews written by the gentlemen who occupy aisle seats . . . (Economy note: Well, today you may be president and tomorrow you are just a postage stamp.)

The average Bostonian has the wrong opinion of me . . . One day I said to an old dowager: "Lady, I am not nearly as bad as I am painted" . . . And she continued: "But, Miss Guinan, you certainly are heavily painted."

I got even . . . I asked another Bostonian why he wore a monocle . . . He told me that he had a weak eye . . . And I continued: "Then why don't you wear a glass hat."

Simple Wrapper

Yes, my life and career are sensationally wrapped up . . . A lot of people may not think that I am such a neat bundle; but I am quiet and simple, after all is said . . . If I ever became to be known as a dignitary, it would cost me my earning capacity . . . $6000 per week . . . So if the public press ever assails me with the title "Lady Guinan," I would be ruined . . . My bank account would then look like it had a blood transfusion . . . Is my face red to match a lot of people's bank accounts?

I like Boston because it stands out in defiance to the commercial part of America . . . The staid old Bostonians have never permitted the greed of commercial activity to surrender the charms of its city to that cause . . . The most valuable plot of ground is occupied by a cemetery.

New York Fable

A statue of Lincoln with the emancipator's hand on the head of a little pickaninny, which stands in Boston, has long been the source of wise-cracking stories in New York . . . New Yorkers say that the regal airs and indifference of the Bostonians are so cold that Lincoln frequently puts his hands in his pockets . . . Off the little pickaninny's head . . . To keep his fingers from getting frost-bitten. If the story is true, and "Abe" does this little trick, I still admire Bostonians. They have the propriety to mind their own business . . . New Yorkers, please take notice . . . You can profit mostly by the foregoing anecdote . . .

Tribute

Now I am going to tell you, dear public, about my first husband . . . Have I got a memory ? ? ? . . . They say that Indians, elephants, and Guinans never forget . . . He was not the kind of husband that you read about in books . . . You know, the kind where the girls dies and the husband has to go back to his wife . . .

If I'm ever asked to name who was the greatest person I have ever met, I would have to answer in all thruthfulness, "John J. Moynahan, of Boston" . . . He is better known as "MOY" . . . No man could ever stand the test of loyalty, sincerity, and devotion better than he.

And has "Moy" a sense of humor? ? . . . And can he take a joke? ? ? . . . Well, folks, he married me.

Spring Signs

Spring is here! ! . . . I can always tell because my Christmas jewelry always turns green . . . And the moths take up their residence in my furs for their summer home . . . Sulphur and molasses are two other famous spring dancers . . . Easter means, to the woman, some new hats and coats and dresses and furs; it means to the man a new necktie and a lot of bills . . . And they both choke him to death . . . The only thing that can lay down on the job this Eastertide and get results is the hen.

Easter Theme Song: My Bunny Lies Over The Ocean, and I Keep "lying," Over Here . . . One thing that you can be sure of is Death and Texas Guinan!

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

It seems almost a pity that George Gershwin's "Girl Crazy," once an upstanding, adult musical comedy, should have been abandoned to the wiles of capsule entertainment. Yet, by no other system of theatrical gymnastics could Boston have seen it; it was removed from the legitimate theater after an encouraging New York engagement, another one not especially brilliant in Chicago and several at way stations. "Girl Crazy," reduced to ninety minutes, nicely pared down to fit the demands of Publix chronology, not only brought about four expansive audiences to the Metropolitan yesterday, but left long lines of anxious customers within the roped enclosures which separate those who have seats from those who hope to eventually gain them.

As an opus in the George Gershwin library, "Girl Crazy" must be catalogued among his minor exercises. But even a minor Gershwin possesses points of interest and intriguing value well above most of the musical items that force their way into the mass production of rival tunesters. Here, at least, you discover four song hits of commanding merit. They may be mentioned casually as "Embraceable You," "I've Got Rhythm," "Bidin' My Time" and "Sam and Delilah." These are already so many chestnuts to the vast radio audience.

The Gershwin score was faithfully protected in the Metropolitan's condensed version of "Girl Crazy." In a story that was exceedingly conventional the entertainment ran its abridged course in excellent order. White collared lads of the East made merry in ripping prohibition fashion in Custerville, Ariz. A dude ranch in the center of the old and familiar, rough and woolly West provided all the necessary inducement for colorful situations. The tenderfoot and the blackleg met on common ground, and good fun was had by all—to the always interesting melodies of George Gershwin. "Girl Crazy," as originally conceived, was peeled down almost to the raw flesh, but it more than survived the ordeal through its wealth of native color, its bracing comedy and its fine endowment of good tunes.

The story of a bad boy sent West to rebuild his character was told in the usual idiom of musical comedy. Hal Thompson was the lad in need of reform, and he acquired it with all the fine graces of an anxious dramatist out to do his best for a lost New Yorker. Frances Upton was both agreeable and easy to gaze upon as the blonde post-mistress of Custerville, and Bert Gordon, Yiddish taxi-driver from Broadway, managed his difficulties with rare humor. Vivian Janis, Donald Foster and Lew Parker distinguished themselves in no small way as the press for time called for a wide open throttle.

On the screen, Lupe Velez, Leo Carrillo and Melvyn Douglas carried on a flirtation, a desperate romance, and some spectacular melodrama in the accepted Mexican style. "The Broken Wing" was the picture. Excellent photography and charming—as well as wholly despicable—characters moved with great precision through the narrative.

EMERGING FROM LENTEN LETHARGY, DRAMA RUSHES FULL SPEED AHEAD

"Dimples" Ricde in "The New Moon," at the Boston Opera house next Wednesday.

History repeats itself! Daniel Poole, as Abraham Lincoln, and Aubrey Beattie, as General U. S. Grant, have a moment of relaxation in "If Booth Had Missed," at the Shubert.

The Double of 'Honest Abe'

Daniel Poole, a graduate of two universities, and lecturer and professor at three universities, who has the most important role of Arthur Goodman's "If Booth Had Missed," began his professional stage career as the most inconspicuous robot in the Guild production of "RUR." After that modest debut, he rose into the ranks of those whose names are mentioned on programs.

When Mr. Poole heard of the production of "If Booth Had Missed" and read that no selection for the part of Lincoln had been made, he wasted no time in getting around to the casting director for the role. And the casting director wasted no time in giving him the part. For Poole's resemblance to Lincoln is so remarkable, his features and general bearing so similar, and his deep resonant voice so representative of the character that the producers of the play felt that they had the best Lincoln ever cast for the part.

And the part is Mr. Poole's delight. For 12 years now, he has been conscious of his resemblance to the Great Emancipator, and once in 1920 found solace in representing Lincoln in a historial pageant.

Maurice the Magnificent in Peak Form in New Picture

By HARRIS MORGAN

You can always enjoy an hour in the cinema if Maurice Chevalier be the host. Fans will find him doing his best singing and acting in "One Hour With You," now featured on screen at the Uptown, and at the Paramount. An old story is served up in most delightful fashion by Ernst Lubitsch, whose name has come to be the synonym of snappy entertainment when combined with that of his Gallic star.

"One Hour With You" will be recognized, so far as its story goes, as a friend of the silent days, when in pantomime only it appeared as "The Marriage Circle," the same Lubitsch officiating with the megaphone. It was an exceedingly frothy plot, but well acted. It is now given musical form, but its chief claim to attention is the gay and altogether captivating service of the chap from Paris, who has yet to suffer his first flop in the American movies.

Of another picture it was said that it was "naughty in a nice way." The phrase applies to Chevalier's latest. It has much sparkle in its dialogue; many of the lines are witty and diverting. Chevalier has sterling support all the way; and the producers put their everything into the movie. A novelty is its permitting the leading characters to take the audience into their confidence; this is intriguing and sets up a spirit of chumminess which the Frenchman fosters to the finish.

Here and there shine what the fan will know as the deft Lubitsch touches. The music is catchy often, and is made the more attractive by Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald. This lass is as charming as ever; another girl who serves well in the film is Genevieve Tobin. Roland Young, with not much in hand, proves how good a good actor can be in a small part; ditto, Charlie Ruggles.

"One Hour With You" is clever and wholly satisfying.

'Tarzan, the Ape Man' Has All the Thrills of the Jungle

From so seasoned a veteran of stage and screen as C. Aubrey Smith, not to speak of Maureen O'Sullivan and Neil Hamilton of the films alone, and Johnnie Weissmuller of aquatic renown, a mere ape steals the honors. A simian, first of all, and after him—or is the ape a "she?"—elephants and other animals. Which is introductory to saying that "Tarzan, the Ape Man" is a sure-fire film that you must not, cannot, miss.

That this back-to-primitive picture is going to be a humdinger for business, was proven yesterday and last night by the queues forming in Massachusetts ave., and winding past the Loew's State box office. It was a sign of good times coming, of a popular movie come to town. Inside the house, it was a sell-out business; and one heard more applause during the lengthy run of the feature than we can recall for any lights and shadows show. And "Tarzan" is worth it; for "Trader Horn" Van Dyke, the director, weaves in all the highlights and the low lights, entwines the realistic with the synthetic, and simply stampedes you into huge enjoyment of all that happens in this amazing maze of truths and impossibilities.

Van Dyke packs in the Hollywood hokum too, but his overload of the melodramatic is so gorgeously tinged with the burlesque that the laughs are more numerous than in most comedies, and far more hearty; while the dumb actors from the zoo and the jungle do thrilling things that stir you.

There has never been a sound picture like this "Tarzan." It stands unique. Van Dyke pours into the microphone little human speech, but a cacophony of animal sounds which are a joy to the ear and frequently a chill upon the spine.

Exciting sequences there are that away you, along with the picturesque and the spectacular. Kipling's Toomai of the Elephants, and his Mowgli, are all here in the spirit, in a merry, mad, marvelous melange of cinematic matter; and it is this touch of fang and claw that make it live, and breathe.

"Tarzan" is in a class by itself, a "wow" in its way, and as refreshing as a cold shower.

GUILELESS

Air Comedy at the Orpheum

Laughs and thrills are provided in "Sky Devils," now to be seen at Loew's Orpheum. Its comedy is reminiscent of "The Cock-Eyed World." The story is based on the adventures of three American flyers during the World War, played by Spencer Tracy, William Boyd and George Cooper, with heart-interest supplied by Ann Dvorak.

On the stage this week, the fare is headlined by William and Joe Mandel, well-known knockout comedians. They have a merry offering of nonsensical comedy bits that score a hilarious hit with the audience.

Another entertaining act on the bill is that of Emily Von Losen and her large company in an elaborate singing and dancing presentation. Manny Besser and Dorothy Balfour in their riotous cross-fire skit; Calvert, Irving and Bird in a harmony singing, talking and comedy skit and the three Kataros, Oriental equilibrists, are among other acts.

Park Theater

The Park double feature program is headed by Mary Nolan in "Docks of San Francisco." Featured in the cast are Jason Robards, Marjorie Beebe, and John Davidson. The second feature is Bill Cody and Andy Shuford in "Texas Pioneers."

VIGILANT

Marion Nixon, appearing in "After Tomorrow" at the Fenway, Beacon and Modern.

The Villain Given the Air--Wow!

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

In the ancient "mellers" the villain always got it in the neck. In the footsteps of that good old American custom, Erich von Stroheim, playing the Jack Dalton role in "The Lost Squadron," featured on the RKO Keith screen, so enmeshes himself in the skein of evil circumstances that the stalwart heroes put him where he cannot do more cinematic harm. That is one thing, but here is another: So realistic was the Von Stroheim brand of dyed-in-the-wool mischief-making, that he made some in the big audience burn up with hatred. Thus one excited patron, rising in his seat to vent his spleen, fairly shrieked:

"You rat!"

This unseemly exclamation is so rare an occurrence in the modern theater that its utterance merits a mention. It proves the good old melodrama has lost none of its power to get an audience "all haired up." Booing and hissing were once the thing, and Mr. Von Stroheim may take the epithet hurled at his shadowgraph as tribute to his acting. "The Lost Squadron" is melodrama with up-to-date motivation. It has love, and murderous machinations—virtue triumphs and the bold, bad genius of the story is in the end trampled in the dust.

The scenarist's fundamental plan is sound, and striking. Several buddies of the air graduate from that school of hard knocks, known as the World War, to face a salvaged democracy that doesn't live up to its pledge to remember the boys who fought over there where the poppies blow on Flanders fields. They drift into stunt flying for the movies. The recreant sweetheart of one of them has married a director, which fact permits a crossfire of jealousies. In a very natural sequence of events, daredevil airplane feats are made, also the development of the tale turns the cameras upon Hollywood's backstage, so to speak.

Had the plot lived up to the high promise, "The Lost Squadron" could have been an epic. It has numerous good points, and is entertaining; but sometimes its narrative suffers from anemia, and its dialogue is inept or trite. It takes all the vitality of the he-men, Richard Dix and Robert Armstrong, to keep the interest pepped up at such times. Both Dix and Armstrong have been given too little attention by the studio's drama squad, and so they do not become outstanding figures. Better than either is the work of Joel McCrea, doing his best acting, and the drolleries of Hugh Herbert.

Mary Astor appears in fine voice, but hasn't much to do. Dorothy Jordan is a sweet young thing, and we have already recorded the patrons' tribute to the Von Stroheim villainy.

Of course, the spectacular flying stunts which take up a great many feet of the film are the achievement of men who know how. They crash with equal safety on sea or land. And provide the thrills.

Stage Who's Who

Virginia Stuart

The advent of The Bostonians to the Boston Opera House, where they will open next Wednesday night with the musical romance, "The New Moon," has brought a glad smile to the lips of one Boston girl. Her name, for the purposes of the theater, is Virginia Stuart, but out in West Medford she is known as Virginia Henry. Virginia, who has just turned 18, has wanted to go on the stage since she first visited a theater with her mother, about ten years ago.

When The Bostonians announced that they were going to hold auditions to select some local talent for their productions, Virginia was on hand, bright and early, to try for a place. Frank Shea, director of The Bostonians, saw Virginia's acrobatic dancing, heard her voice, noted her beauty of face and figure and she was hired forthwith.

JOHN GALSWORTHY SURRENDERS TO MOVIES

Frank Tuttle to Direct His "The Apple Tree" as Independent

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, March 26—John Galsworthy must have had a change in heart since I interviewed him in Palm Springs seven years ago. On that memorable day he would have nothing to do with movies—as for American films—well, in his opinion, Hades described by Dante was better.

Louella O. Parsons

Now he has agreed to let Frank Tuttle direct his book, "The Apple Tree," on an independent program. Mr. Tuttle must be in England by May 1 to get the apple trees when they are in full bloom.

The script sent to Galsworthy has been okayed so all that remains for Frank is to get a release—and he expects to have that before he sails for England, where the picture will be made.

"Woikin' Goil" Fillum

Whenever you read that a Sylvia Sidney story has been purchased you know Paramount has studied its picture possibilities from all angles. Miss Sidney is one of the Paramount stars who is never carelessly cast. One of the latest purchases for her is "Boldmans," a novel by Siegfried Siwertz. The story is that of a department store with the fair Sylvia as a salesgirl. Long time since we have had a "Woikin' Goil" tale of this kind. But it's like one of the 13 original plots, always good for a return engagement.

Constance Knows

Who better than Constance Bennett knows the truth about Hollywood? She knows all there is to know and that's a plenty. Perhaps that is why she is going to star in "The Truth About Hollywood," Adela Rogers Hyland's story for Radio. Mrs. Hyland's contribution to that same story is considerable for she, too, is an authority on this town. "The Truth About Hollywood" will be made immediately and "Free Lady," ("Unmated") will be postponed until some changes are made in the story. George Cukor will direct Miss Bennett and Robert Presnell is preparing the continuity for "The Truth About Hollywood."

Another Horror

The doctors soon won't have a secret left what with all of these pictures being made showing scientific researches and the pathological conditions of unfortunates. "The Illustrious Corpse," now being made by Tiffany, specializes in a man without a memory. Lucien Littlefield plays this role. Warner Brothers has "Dr. X," a horror thriller and I am told there is enough horror to give any one who likes pictures of this kind, a real thrill. "The Illustrious Corpse" has Miriam Seegar and Theodore Von Eltz as romantic leads.

Snapshots of Hollywood

SALLY EILERS giving an amusing account of the day she visited her step-daughter at school. SALLY and BUBBLES DENNY talking children over the luncheon table at MRS. WILLIAM DAVEY'S (ALYCE MILLS') Easter luncheon. JOAN MARSH and MERNA KENNEDY guests of honor at the Assistance League, Friday, April 1. No April Fool about it either. ROLAND YOUNG saying au revoir to Hollywood and leaving for a trip to Europe. He returns in July after making a picture abroad. MRS. B. P. SCHULBERG entertaining with a buffet supper tonight. AUSTIN PARKER getting ready for a vacation. THELMA TODD remains behind to work. SIDNEY FOX still "keeping company" with JEAN NEGULESCO, dining at the Gotham. ED PERKINS, Hollywood publicity director, off for New York for a holiday and business trip. PHILLIPS HOLMES still buying FLORENCE RICE'S luncheons. This romance seems the most serious of any of his previous affairs. He has just signed a new contract with Paramount. That's all today.

"Girl Crazy"

The time schedule for the Metropolitan stage show, "Girl Crazy," the Gershwin musical comedy, follows: p. m., 12:45, 3:35, 6:25, 9:15.

Vaudeville Is Bowdoin Cue

At the Bowdoin Square, beginning tomorrow, the management will provide a good picture bill, a vaudeville program of seven selected acts. The feature film is Constance Bennett in "Lady With a Past," with Ben Lyon and David Manners. Another is "Soul of the Slums." Wednesday is "Cabaret Night," with extra vaudeville.

Kerchoo Is the Fever Sign

For all his youthful appearance, Anthony Kemble-Cooper, young English actor who plays the role of Simon Bliss in "Hay Fever," at the Plymouth, Mnoday, has been seen on stage for eight years. He first paraded before a New York audience in the historic revival of "The School for Scandal," with Ethel Barrymore and John Drew, back in 1923. After that he played with the late Robert Mantell in Shakespearean repertoire for two years.

Last season saw him again in a play with Lionel Atwill, this time in "The Silent Witness," an English melodrama with murder and sudden death and a thrilling courtroom scene. Anthony Kemble-Cooper comes from a notable family of English actors whose members have been on the English stage for generations. Violet Kemble-Cooper is his sister.

Gayety Theater

On the screen starting tomorrow the feature pictures will be "The Silent Witness" with William Collier, Jr., and Una Merkel, and Joe E. Brown in "A Local Boy Makes Good."

Ernest Toch Is Guest Artist With Symphony Orchestra

By MOSES SMITH

Ernest Toch, ultra-modern German composer, who has been for many people one of the hardest nuts to crack, is the guest at this week's Boston Symphony Concerts, where two of his recent works are performed, with the composer himself as piano soloist in one of them.

The opening number is the Bunte Suite, played at yesterday's concert for the first time in America. The word Bunte means "motley," "vari-colored," and so forth. The five movements played yesterday are in several styles—a march, an expressive slow movement, a marionettes' dance, a passacaglia and a "carousal." It was this last movement, infectiously jazzy and exciting, which accounted for the enthusiasm of the audience, for one of the most favorable receptions a new work has received here in years.

The music was not merely entertaining, however. It was constructed with technical sureness; in the slow movement it disclosed a melodist of the first water, and all the movements, contrasted as they were, were marked by something rare in contemporary composition—a definitive personal style. More serious in subject-matter was the piano concerto which followed, introduced here three years ago by Jesus Maria Sanromà. Toch, who is largely self made as pianist, acquitted himself nobly in the excruciatingly difficult music he had set down for others to play. He had mechanical dexterity and sureness, and a touch not ordinarily associated with home-made virtuosi.

The orchestral performance of both works under Mr. Koussevitzky seemed to us notably sympathetic, though perhaps it might be more tactful to leave this to the composer. At any rate there was no questioning the brilliance of the performance of Chaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, which ended the concert. This work has long been regarded as one of the Russian conductor's tours de force, but the audience outdid itself in its applause.

Titian Heads

Eleven "auburn beauties," each skilled in the playing of two or more musical instruments, compose the orchestra that is known as Babe Egan and her Hollywood Redheads, who will headline the vaudeville bill at the Scollay next week. When Miss Egan decided to organize a girl's band, she happened to be in Hollywood. This made it possible, not only for her to secure talented girls, but to get them with the same color of hair as her own.

Fields, Smith, and Fields have a minature revue. Edith Griffith, radio singer will offer popular songs. Freddie Pisano and company will give a comedy sketch. Tommy and Betty Wonder, are expert dancers.

MAYBE I'M WRONG

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

Hollywood, March 26—They were taking a wild animal picture at one of the studios not long ago and the production was being delayed because the lion tamer failed to show up for work one morning. "We've got to get this scene filmed," stormed the director, "And nobody else can handle those lions: See if you can find out where he is." "He's in the hospital," replied the assistant director, "He talked back to his wife last night."

There's a life-saver down at Malibu Beach who saves only the pretty girls and tosses the others back in the ocean.

Greetings The Easter Greetings this week come from the Rev. Arthur T. Brooks of the Dudley St. Baptist Church, Boston.

❖ ❖ Easter and Youth ❖ ❖

THE world is celebrating Easter. It is the greatest day of the Christian year. It marked the beginning of a new epoch in the history of mankind in thought, in hope, in attitude toward life. Not only did Christ on the Resurrection Day bring life and immortality to light but he started the world along a new road to hopeful, earnest, religious, glorious living.

Youth should be thrilled with the fact that Jesus Christ was a young man. He was crucified and was resurrected before He was thirty-three. What an impress His life made! What an heritage He bequeathed to the world! It is not the length of life that counts. Life is measured in terms of accomplishment. Jesus Christ accomplished! He is the natural leader of youth!

To me there are three things which the life of Jesus Christ accentuates; first, His belief in preparation. He prepared thirty years for His three years of public ministry. We know something of his life up to the age of twelve, but after that, until the age of twenty-nine or thirty, we know little. But one thing we do know, according to the scriptures, "He grew in favor with God and man." You see it was a dual growth. A growth toward man and a growth toward God. No young man can succeed in life with only one side of his nature developed.

Preparation! Preparation! Young man, do not be afraid to spend years in earnest, honest, foundational preparation for your work in life. Thirty years of preparation, three years of work before He left His mark indelibly upon the ages!

Dr. Arthur T. Brooks

Another thing that stands out is His inflexibility of purpose. He had a certain work to do. Steadily He set His face toward doing that work. Nothing could turn Him aside.

You will notice, too, that He was very positive. There was nothing negative about Jesus Christ. He knew what He knew! He defined His position without compromise. He was tender, compassionate, merciful, sympathetic, but He was positive—positive without being obstinate. There are few things more odious than an obstinate man. But a positive man is a joy to know in these days of "trimmers in high places."

There are three additional thoughts which the death and resurrection of Christ bring to the knowledge of youth. First, to die young in a great cause is better than to live to old age as a nonentity. Second (and possibly this includes the first), death does not end life. The soul goes marching on. Christ proved that.

Now let me emphasize one other thing. We can believe in and follow Jesus Christ in all His life and His teachings because in the most improbable of all His teachings He vindicated Himself by His resurrection. He had said in reference to His body, "Destroy this temple and in three days I will raise it again." He did. That is the reason we celebrate Easter. It is the victory of life and immortality over the grave and death. Follow Him, young man, follow Him! In all your thoughts, your plans, your purposes, your ways of life, follow Him!

A message for next Saturday has been prepared by C. Augustus Norwood, director of educational publicity for the First Church of Christ, Scientist.

20 Years in Majors and Still Goes Strong

As far as Herb Pennock is concerned it looks as if there was life in the Old Boy, yet. Holding the Braves hitless for five innings, as he did earlier in the week, would indicate that Old 'Erbie isn't through winning games for the Yankees, despite 20 years' service in the majors. When Pennock started curling 'em over for the old Athletics back in 1912, Babe Ruth wasn't even heard of. Only Red Faber, Rabbit Maranville and Jack Quinn were around when Herb first was burning up the big leagues. Yet he still is good enough to let only one Brave get on base in 5 innings and none past first. Yes, there's life in the Old Boy yet! It was Pennock's baffling change of pace that turned back the Braves. Mixing 'em up long has been Pennock's forte. In the game at St. Pete the veteran never threw two balls alike to the same batter. His drop, his famous "Butterfly," his fast ball, his slow curve and his still slower curve were mixed up in an assortment that had the Braves breaking their backs to hit him. Wonder if the veteran will exercise the same wizardry when the league race opens as he has in the Southern training camps. We'll probably see when the Yankees open their series with the Red Sox here one month from today.

Looking out of the window a few minutes ago the gray walls across the street faded from view and gave way to a long, green fairway bordered with a pond on one side and thick forest growth on the other—tee off hole at Wolf Hollow, down in the Delaware Water Gap. Before we knew it we were day dreaming on links far and near. Perhaps that is why our thoughts turned to fighters with whom we have golfed. A blazing hot day with Jack Dempsey, daddy of 'em all, and the old Man Killer breaking out in the middle of a foursome with "Oh Shucks! Let's play pinochle." No sooner said than done. Dempsey, Jack Renault, Joe Benjamin and ye humble scribe playing pinochle in the shade of a mighty oak alongside a purling stream. Nine holes with Gene Tunney at Silver Lake, nine holes of literature, the dictionary and proper drawing room procedure. A wonderful morning with Father Connolly and Tommy Loughran at Harvey's Lake. One of those rare June days and two wonderful companions. Max Schmeling making a beautiful drive at Endicott and awaking the echoes with a booming "Wow-w-w-w!" in gladness over it. Sixth hole at Hoosick Falls with Izzy Kaplan. (But Izzy isn't a scrapper! No? All photographers are scrappers!) Seeing Izzy take nine strokes to get out of the rough and then hole in and brazenly announce "Six." He explained that he wasn't taking strokes down there in the rough at all, but was killing snakes.

PAOLINO

Taking it by and large, we had the most fun with Paolino. down at Wolf Hollow we played 36 holes a day with the Basque Woodchopper for 18 successive days. Midsummer and the toughest course in the country. No wonder we boiled off almost 15 pounds. At No. 3 hole the first day, Paolino decided it was too hot. So he took off his shirt and drove off naked above the waist. When we attempted to remonstrate with him, explaining he would offend some of the fair sex along the course, the hairy-chested fellow took out his pocket handkerchief and argued: "Bah! Ze dames wear ze bathing suit you make t'ree out of deese wit', an you say they keeck because I no wear ze shirt-e-e!"

"No shirte-e-e, no playe-e-e!" we insisted and Paolino got mad and satirically sent the caddy back to the club house for two sweaters and an overcoat! Still had a "mad" on when he drove us back to hotel and went at such a crazy clip he killed two hens and ran over a dog on the way. But bright and early the next morning he showed up with his gold tusks flashing from his wide mouth—Nature certainly gave the Basque Woodchopper a great mouth for pie—and invited, "Hey, Gawge, we go play ze golf. Me got nice new shirte-e-e!"

They tell us that Johnny Indriasano is the best golf player among the knights of the scrambled ears. One of these glad spring days perhaps the Big Boss will let us go and see Johnny make one of his famous drives. We are told that he'll outdrive any professional golfer in the country and that one big Boston gambler has a $1000 bill he will wager at evens with any golf pro who thinks he can hit a longer ball than Indriasano.

The reference to Jack Dempsey up atop the column reminds us that the old Man Killer, swinging south from a one-night boxing stand in Toronto, last Wednesday, stopped in New York long enough to tell Bill Carey of the Madison Square Garden Corporation that he would not consider boxing for the Six Hundred Millionaires as long as Jimmy Johnston held the boxing helm for them. Johnston took Jack Kearns' part in the jam between Dempsey and his manager and the old Man Killer never has forgiven the Boy Bandit for it.

"I'll be glad to fight Carnera, Levinsky or Paolino in New York," declared Dempsey, "but not for the Madison Square Garden bunch as long as Jimmy Johnston is connected with the Garden!"

"We don't want you to fight Carnera or Levinsky," countered Johnston, "we want you to fight Ernie Schaaf. And a team of horses couldn't pull you in the same ring with that blond slugger from Boston and you know it!"

Battalino Wants to Meet Petrolle Again

New York, March 26 (INS)—Billy Petrolle, the famous Fargo Express, was en route today for his home in Fargo, N. D., where he will take a well-earned rest. He received $15,428.65 for scoring a technical knockout over Christopher (Bat) Battalino, former featherweight champion, here Thursday night.

Battalino, whose share of the purse was $14,206.99, wants a return bout. He declared Referee Gunboat Smith should not have stopped the fight in the 12th round, but boxing experts disagreed with him. Petrolle will not fight again until May.

N. U. Diamond Squad in Action Today

Northeastern's baseball squad will hold its first outdoor practice today at Huntington Field. Coach Al McCoy has been working with the 60 candidates for the past few weeks in the cage.

Capt. Bill Carter at short, Harvey Bixby second base, Adrian Cleveland on first and Harry Bedell third-sacker, will comprise team A's infield while Ned Murray, Stew Presper and Gil MacDonald are slated to patrol the outfield. Herb Gallagher on the mound and Johnny Grosz behind the plate complete the A lineup.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

HORSE RACE MEET OPENS AT ARENA

Horse races, the first ever staged indoors, are billed for this afternoon at the opening of the horse racing tournament at the Arena for the benefit of the Newsboys' Foundation.

Prominent horse owners, together with their jockeys and mounts, were at the Arena until early today. According to those gathered to see the tryouts, the times made were good.

Greater Boston children are expected at the Arena this afternoon to witness the races, and to see more than 20 children take part in the giant gymkhana. Wild West events, jumping, cossack riding, Roman standing riding, a mounted band and several other features designed to entertain the children will be presented.

Those attending this evening's performance will witness four solid hours of horse action. The showing of saddle horses under 15.2 will be the first feature of the evening.

The second division of the tournament will open with a thrilling steeplechase. Flat races and Roman riding races are followed by three chukkers of polo with the teams from the 110th Cavalry and Battery A in competition.

W. G. A. SEASON OPENS APRIL 14

The district team schedule has been given out by Mrs. F. A. Stanwood, secretary of the Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts.

The W. G. A. season opens with medal play competition for each of the four districts on Thursday, April 14. The first league matches will be played a week later.

Due to the fact that there will be 15 players on each team this year, and because of the re-arrangement of the districts, the medal play competition previous to the regular scheduled matches will be considered more important than ever.

Michaels and Kline to Hurl for Sox Today

By JOE CASHMAN

Macon, Ga., March 26—Manager John Collins of the Red Sox piloted a squad of 14 players to this old, historic town, this afternoon, to play a return battle with the Hartford club of the Eastern League, which is training here.

Big Bob Kline and John "Lefty" Michaels will be assigned the task of leading the Fenway flock to their second win in as many starts against the bushers from the Nutmeg State.

The work of Michaels will be followed very closely by Collins today. The young southpaw from Buffalo has shown a world of stuff in scrub contests. If he is impressive against Hartford, which is composed largely of promising Brooklyn rookies, he will make Easter a joyous one indeed for his pilot.

The rest of the Sox lineup will be the same as started in the first game of the series last Thursday, except behind the bat, where Howie Storie will work instead of Charlie Berry, and in left field, Tripp Sigman, because of his late batting spree, will substitute for Jack Rothrock.

The Sox will return to Savannah tonight and rest tomorrow, to play nine exhibition games in as many days, beginning Monday.

Texas, it seems, grows her men not only big and strong, but handsome as well. Jack Russell, who hails from Paris in the Lone Star State, has long been rated the best looking of the Sox, and his closest rival for honors in the pulchritude line is Pete Donahue, a native of Ft. Worth.

They put away the sidewalks in this town Saturday night and don't take 'em out again until Monday morning. No sport or amusement is permitted on the Sabbath. The blue laws, however, make little difference to the majority of the Sox. Their hotel, with its swimming pool, miniature golf course, orchestra, radio, library and card room, offers so much opportunity for recreation that few of the players ever leave it looking for pleasure.

Tom Oliver and Earl Webb, roomies and buddies, have reached an agreement in case either is challenged to a punch-swapping contest. If the challenger weighs 165 pounds or less, Tom will defend the honor of the Oliver-Webb room: if he is heavier, Earl will do the battling.

Bob Quinn's personal nomination as the greatest pitcher he has ever seen is a most unusual one. He passes up Mathewson, Young, Johnson, Waddell and the others most frequently mentioned in favor of the late Urban Shocker.

Deacon Daniel MacFayden, ace of the Fenway flingers, is one of the best pitchers in the game today, in the opinion of Rabbit Maranville. The Tribal captain confided to us at St. Pete that if he were playing in the same league with the Somerville boy, he doubted that he would make a hit a season against him. "With a championship club, he would win 25 games a campaign with ease," asserted the midget.

There isn't enough baseball interest in this town to support a minor league club, but almost as many people turn out and pay admission to each of the Six Regular-Yannigan contests as watch all the exhibition contests of the Collinsmen at Pensacola last spring or the spring before.

Moe Gottlieb, the Arlington youngster, who rose from mascot to assistant trainer of the Sox this spring, is more than making good. The athletes like him and they like his work, which is saying a lot, for he performs the important task of rubbing them daily.

In Bob Klein and Bob Weiland the Sox has two of the largest men in the majors, the former standing 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighing 220 pounds, and the latter being an inch taller and only ten pounds lighter.

COL. WINN PLANS FOR PHAR LAP

Chicago, March 26 (AP)—Australia's lightning bolt, Phar Lap, has blazed a rainbow over the American turf world.

Just when everything looked dark for almost every race track after a losing winter season, south and west, the wonder horse from "down under" has arrived to give the sport of kings a new thrill. It is just like another Babe Ruth entering baseball, or a second Jack Dempsey climbing into the ring at his best.

"I cannot think of any better possible break to American racing than the invasion of Phar Lap," said the 71-year-old Col. Matt Winn, directing genius of the Kentucky Derby for the last 33 years, today. In addition to producing America's most colorful and picturesque race, Col. Winn also is managing director of Washington Park and Lincoln Field in Chicago, and Churchill Downs and Latonia in Kentucky.

"The invasion of Phar Lap and his victory in the Agua Caliente handicap has stirred the imagination of every race fan and given us all renewed enthusiasm for a bigger and better turf year," he added.

"They tell me he really is a great horse. He must be to stand that long 10,000-mile ride over the Pacific and come out as sound as a dollar. You know, he reminds me a lot of Old Exterminator, and Sun Beau in that respect. Those two could be shipped from New York and wake up— yes, they went to sleep, those horses —and wake up in their car the next day as fit as a fiddle and win their races."

Col. Winn began laying plans today for staging a big match race for Phar Lap, and some of the best stake runners in June at Washington Park, for a purse of $25,000 or $50,000, depending upon the thoroughbred chosen to oppose the big red horse.

Phar Lap will be shipped shortly direct to Washington Park from California.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

Touching All the Bases

Biloxi, Miss., March 26 (AP)—The injury jinx favored Joe Judge of the Washington Senators by keeping Joe Kuhel, his rival for the regular first base post, out of today's game with the Baltimore Orioles.

Judge was picked for today's and tomorrow's games with Baltimore at Gulfport after Kuhel was struck on the glove hand yesterday by a batted ball. It was the first injury of importance to a regular this season.

Fort Worth, Tex., March 26 (AP)—The battle for the third base job with the Chicago White Sox, involving Luke Appling and Carey Selph, appears to be going in favor of the latter. Selph, who insisted for a while that he would rather play in his Texas League than with the Sox, has been hitting and fielding so well that he seems certain of starting the season as a regular.

San Francisco, March 26 (AP)—Rogers Hornsby today was contemplating changes in the Chicago Cub battlefront to produce some major league batting power. The Cubs have been outhit in two games by the San Francisco Missions, and yesterday managed to win in 10 innings because the coast leaguers committed five errors.

Los Angeles, March 26 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers open a three-game series with the Pittsburgh Pirates here today after a disastrous pair of contests with Hollywood in San Diego, both of which the coast leaguers won.

The Tigers might have won yesterday's game if Tommy Bridges hadn't gone wild in the eighth inning, passing five batters and letting in four runs.

New Orleans, La., March 26 (AP)—Willis Hudlin was to be allowed to have as many innings as he pleased today for the Indians against the New Orleans Pelicans. Mel Harder gets the same opportunity in Sunday's game, indicating the Tribe pitching veterans are rounding into shape.

Fort Myers, Fla., March 26 (AP)—The old law of the survival of the fittest has been applied again, and as a result some young players will not help the Athletics fight for the pennant this year.

The 23 players definitely to be retained, according to Connie Mack, are: Pitchers, Grove, Walberg, Earnshaw, Mahaffey, Rommel, Bowman, Cain and Krause; catchers, Cochrane, Heving and Majeski; infielders, Foxx, Roettger, Bishop, Williams, Dykes, McNair and Boley; outfielders, Simmons, Haas, Miller, Cramer and Coleman. Mack has until June 15 to let the extra men go.

Winter Haven, Fla., March 26 (AP)—The Phillies face Babe Ruth and the rest of the Yankees at St. Petersburg today in the Phils' last game of the season on Florida soil. They leave for Atlanta Sunday.

Every man on the team goes to Atlanta, but Manager Burt Shotton has intimated some of them may be sent to Durham while the rest visit in Atlanta for four days.

Bradenton, Fla., March 26 (AP) It may be that Manager Max Carey of the Brooklyn Dodgers will have to play first base himself. Since Del Bissonette's injury, Carey has been trying out Murray Howell at the initial sack, but the rookie's fielding leaves something to be desired. Carey still hopes to swing a trade with the St. Louis Cardinals for Jim Bottomley, Jim Collins or Pat Crawford.

Los Angeles, March 26 (AP)—The New York Giants indubitably are major league champions of the Pacific coast.

They beat the Chicago Cubs, five games to three; the Detroit Tigers, three to one, and the Pittsburgh Pirates, two to none. They are having some difficulty, however, explaining away two straight defeats by the Hollywood Stars of the Pacific Coast League.

Husky Trackmen Move Outdoors

Joe Zeller, Northeastern's track coach who specializes in the field events and has developed several Eastern and New England champions, took his boys this morning for the first outdoor practice of the season.

Curtis Scott, former Newton youth, and Clinton Underhill, a Worcester product, are on the squad, and are high jumpers of marked ability.

JOHNNY GOLDEN WINS TITLE

Pinehurst, N. C., March 26 (AP)—Johnny Golden, heavy set Noroton, Ct., star, today won the North and South open title, besting Craig Wood of Deal, N. J., in a play-off.

Golden shot a 74 on the extra 18 holes while Wood had a 78. They were tied yesterday at the end of the regular 72-hole route with 286 each.

The victory in the play-off was worth $500 to Golden, who took first money of $1500 by it, while Wood got $1000 for second place.

They battled on even terms through the eleventh hole with the lead of 10 switching. On the twelfth Golden took a one-stroke advantage and was never headed after that. He clinched maytters on the sixteenth with an eagle three to Wood's five.

Whalers in Cup Final Tomorrow

Soccer fans in the East will watch with interest for the outcome of the national cup final tomorrow at St. Louis between New Bedford Whalers, eastern champions, and the Stix Baer eleven of St. Louis, western champions.

The Whalers have left New Bedford and according to Manager Sam Marks the entire squad is in perfect condition after a week's intensive training on the Cape.

Eagle Linksmen Trail Villanova

Chestnut Hill, Pa., March 26—Boston College golf team opened its Southern trip by trailing Villanova, 4 to 2, on Marble Hall Golf Club here. It was the opening match of the season for both teams.

Dick Nugent won the only individual point for the Eagles by defeating Capt. Hughey Baker.

TRIBE FACES DODGERS TODAY

Clearwater, Fla., March 26—Bill McKechnie brought his Braves here this morning for their second and final exhibition game of the spring with the Brooklyn Robins.

Papa Carey's chickens were grilled by the Braves in the previous conflict, and mostly by rookie Bobby Brown, right hand flinger, so they are anxious to even the score.

Bill Sherdel

Bill Sherdel, Coleman, McAfee and Mangum will see mound service for the Braves, with Sherdel doing the major portion of the chucking today.

Freddy Leach, recent purchase of the Braves, is with the club, and will scamper in left field today.

Leach was in the Braves' line-up over at St. Pete when the Tribe dropped a 7 to 5 verdict to the Cincinnati Reds.

The Friday loss could not be blamed on Fred, however, for he socked out a nice double and later scored on a hit by Berger.

The Tribe showed considerable improvement in hitting in the Reds game, making 10 base blows. Not a startling achievement, but if the Braves continue to improve their batting will be a National League feature when the campaign gets under way.

Walter Berger and Art Shires were the kings of the Tribal batsmen, with a brace of blows apiece. Shires was effective in the field, too. Art believes in deeds, not words, when he is playing and he saves most of his best lines for the peaceful moments, in the post dinner sessions in the hotel lobby.

The Daily Dozen

—Myles T. McSweeney—

If Primo Carnera remains steadfast in his resolution, his marraige, if as and when, is bound to be a success. Says Primo: "I shall not get married until I become a first class fighter."

Too many men enter the blissful state without ever having studied even the rudiments of fighting, and are hopelessly outclassed from the time the wedding gong rings until the undertaker counts them out.

Primo says he neither smokes nor drinks. But he didn't say what.

"Battalino . . . his nose broken by one of Petrolle's right hand punches . . . his face pounded to a pulp, was lurching crazily about the ring when Referee Smith stopped the bout" . . . Jim Corbett, speaking of Battalino, calls that "courage."

For doing nothing more harmless than "folding his arms across his breast, assuming a frown, and insisting that he was Napoleon, doctors ordered the patient committed to an asylum." They called that insanity.

Of course, Battalino got paid for allowing Petrolle to make hash out of his face. But our vote still goes to Napoleon.

Without waiting for further ceremonies, the baseball season can now be regarded as officially opened. Babe Ruth hit his first home run.

Ruth's $75,000 salary is not so high, relatively speaking. Judge Landis draws $100,000 for merely pitching one ball.

Art Shires will be the most colorful player in baseball if the the Braves permit him to wear his shrieking neckties during games.

Shires, incidentally, was forced to quit work on his autobiography He wore out the "I" key.

But at that, Shires must be considered quite modest. He never has referred to himself as "We."

Cut Race Meeting at Agua Caliente

Agua Caliente, Mex., March 26 (AP)—It was officially announced tonight that there will be no summer race meeting at Agua Caliente this year and that the 1932-33 winter season will start Christmas Day instead of Thanksgiving and end March 28.

Business conditions caused the decision to forego the summer session.

NORTH SHORE LINKS BUSY

If the play at the North Shore Golf and Tennis Club during the past two days can be taken as a criterion, there will be a large turnout at this popular resort over the week-end.

Bud Clancy, the club professional, reports that since the weather changed for the better last Thursday, the North Shore course has been very busy. The course is in fine condition for this season of the year. The fairway are dry and unusually firm.

A. S. Brown, Jr., sponsor of the North Shore Golf and Tennis Club, is planning to hold an open tournament on April 19, for which he will donate valuable prizes.

Sports Night at City Club Monday

Myer Etcoff and Milton Cantor, both of Boston, have been chosen by the Palestine Stadium Club to run a sport and theatrical night, to be held at the Boston City Club, on next Monday night.

Among those who will appear will be Hy Diamond, Eddie Curley, Charles Parker, Jake Zeramby, Whitey Hurwitz, Benny Gershman, Jack McCarthy, Charley Kelley, Ernie Schaaf, Ruby Levine and Jimmy Sacco. Al Lacy will referee.

There will be two wrestling bouts to support the card: Ted Germaine vs. George Myerson and Rocky Stone vs. Jake Braff. Sam Smith will referee.

Boston Man in N. Y. Court Final Today

New York, March 26—William Wright of Philadelphia battles here today, in the final of the national court tennis championship tournament, with Frank Frazier of Boston.

Quincy Golfers on Stearns Team

Mont Vernon, N. H., March 26—Eight matches have been arranged for the six-man golf team at the Stearns School. The first is April 15, with Nashua high.

Binghamton Reports First Baseball Victim

Binghamton, N. Y., March 26 (INS)—Richard Conk, 17, today was recorded as the first baseball accident victim of the season, having died of a fractured skull after being struck on the head with a ball during a sandlot game here.

A gold state handicap card was presented Francis Ouimet, national amateur golf champion, by President Talbot C. Chase of the Massachusetts Golf Association.

Short Shots at Braves

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 26—It is quite evident that big Bobby Brown of Hull is not going to be a minor league pitcher this season. He's got everything that most great young hurlers have—plus brains.

St Pete fans think that the Dodgers got their signals crossed when they traded Herman. The infield is much classier with Stripp and Cuccinello, but the old batting punch that Herman mixed in seemed to be missing.

The Braves' clubhouse is all dolled up with signs like the Yale dressing room before a Harvard game. But there's one that seems to be out of place. It reads: "Be a booster, not a knocker." And what McKechnie needs is a couple of boys who can knock that apple.

Fred Aberg, once a wrestler for Paul Bowser, is a waiter in the hotel where the Tribe wigwams. So there's always cauliflower on the menu.

Bruce Cunningham admits that he has improved a lot since last year and says he learned plenty from Muddy Ruel and Mickey Cochrane on the baseball trip to Japan. "It's great to pitch to a couple of receivers like that," says Bruce.

The Braves must be taking in a barrel of money in these exhibition games. The St. Pete fans turn out in big numbers and the crowd is seldom less than 1000 flanneled customers.

There'll be little laughing at the Brooklyn team this season. The curtain has fallen on the comedy with Max Carey directing the show. But remember they always have Ike Boone, who usually catches flies on the top of his head, to use in right field. Boone, however, can still wipe off hostile smirks when he's up there swinging.

The first indication of Whataman Shires doing more thinking than he's paid for was seen in one game when he raced past third with Hank Gowdy, coaching there, giving him the stop signal. Shires disregarded orders entirely and luckily made home. He'd better not pull this too often on old Hankus-Pankus or he'll be taking a trip somewhere.

However, Shires is looking better as time goes by. He's not as great as he says he is, but he'll do. Occasionally the first base bag comes up and trips Shires, but he generally handles himself well around that sector.

The Great One is also getting in his base knocks. They're not the sizzling kind, but manage to land here and there where the other team "ain't." And that, after all, is what makes a batting average fatter.

Bill Akers, on second base, is something of a mystery. He looks sensational and turns in some brilliant plays on the kind of raps that other second sackers can't get their mitts on. But the ones right at him are never certain.

If the Braves could only have picked up a good infielder they might have spent their money more profitably. Worthington, Berger, Schulmerich, Clark and Eckhardt are all high-class gardeners and Leach is going to make one of them sit on the bench. It won't be Berger as Hub fans don't have to be told.

HERE'S ANOTHER "J. J."

Let's see we've had James J. Jeffries, James J. Corbett, James Joseph Tunney, although the world knows him as "Gene," all world's heavyweight champions. Now MICKY WALKER, former middleweight champion, comes along with another "J. J." He has christened his infant son by his second marriage JAMES J. WALKER, after Mayor Jimmy Walker of New York. Here's the happy family, Ma, Pa and the new "J. J."

REDS BIDDING FOR HAFEY

Tampa, Fla., March 26 (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds today went after Chick Hafey, Cardinal holdout as a prize addition to their growing collection of National League baseball stars.

Hafey led the league in batting last year, and made a profound impression on the Reds by casually cracking two home runs in one day at Cincinnati.

Cincinnati wants him, but so, apparently, does the rest of the National League.

That was the information given President Sidney Weil of the Reds yesterday when he broached the matter to the Cardinal's management. Undaunted, he planned to try again today.

The attitude of St. Louis was described as being that Hafey would not be sold or traded until he has signed with the Cardinals for another year. Weil was believed to be relying on rising annoyance at Hafey's holdout tactics.

Cup Semifinals on Soccer Program

The State Cup semifinals occupy the limelight tomorrow. In the eastern section the Clan McGregors, leaders of the Boston and District League, oppose the Revere Corinthians, leaders of the Bay State League, at Lincoln Park, South End.

Springfield will be the scene of the western semifinal with the Worcester Scandinavians and the Swedish Sport Club of Sringfield the contestants. testants.

Two Boston Soccer Games on Tomorrow

The Boston and District Soccer League has two excellent soccer games scheduled tomorrow, the Beacon A. C. and the Norwegian-Americans clashing at Glendale Park, Everett, and the Bird & Son and Hyde Park elevens meeting at Readville Park, Readville.

The Bird & Sons and Beacons are tied for second place in the league standing, and both will be out to bag full points with a chance of getting in the playoffs at stake.

Giving You a Short Answer

—By DAMON RUNYON—

(Mons. Runyon's replies to recently submitted interrogations.)

New York, March 26 (US)—Jack Curley's right name is Armand Jacques Schuel.

Ice hockey is faster than basketball. (Says I.)

Heroville is 5000 to 1 in the Kentucky Dubby quotations, and you can have him.

Sam Langford's favorite punch was a right hand inside a left hook, and it was a lily, too.

John Pesek, who used to heave guys who challenged Strangler Lewis, not only still rassles around the Middle West, but he offers to chuck Lewis, Londos and De Glane in one night—or maybe it's all at once.

Peter Jackson Great

Pat Caraway, of the White Sox, won 10 and lost 24 games in 1931, but lookit who he was with.

Peter Jackson, of Australia, a heavyweight, is said by the old timers to have been the greatest fighter ever produced by the Negro race, but hold out Gans for me.

Battling Battalino isn't much of a puncher, but he's an everlasting mauler, on the order of Ace Hudkins, and Battling Nelson, and that kind.

Brick Muller, of California, holds the record for the longest forward pass, a 70-yard push to Stephens against Ohio State in 1920.

Credit Mons. Runyon with another error in saying Les Darcy, the Australian, made his only appearance in an American ring in taking a bow at Madison Square Garden, when the fact is he belted out one Len Rowland somewhere down south.

Henderson "Beanpole"

Harold Henderson is undoubtedly the tallest-for-weight of the present day gladiators, standing 6 feet 1 inch, (Schmeling's height) and being able to make 147 pounds the welterweight limit.

William A. Brady, the theatrical producer, is the only fistic manager that had two heavyweight champions—James J. Jeffries and James J. Corbett, though Tom Jones and Jack Kearns have both had three world's champions in different divisions.

The smallest fighter of real ability in the history of the ring was probably Jimmy Wilde, of England, when he scaled less than 100 pounds and was beating good fighters.

Jack Jones beat Patsy Tunny, (no kin to Gene) in 276 rounds at Cheshire, England, in 1825, and that's the record, but it was under London prize ring rules, when a good fierce scowl constituted a round.

James J. Corbett never boxed in Europe, nor did Bob Fitzsimmons or Jess Willard, but all our other heavyweight champions from Sullivan down to Schmeling boxed there, including Tunney, who put up his dukes several times in France as a soldier gladiator.

Under Nate Lewis, the boxing director, nearly every show at the Chicago stadium this season has made money.

Princeton and Rutgers played the first game of intercollegiate football in 1869, and Rutgers won, 6 goals to 4, though they played another game the same month which was won by Princeton.

Soccer Fray at Lynn

The Riversides and Boston Rangers clash at the General Electric Stadium, in Lynn, tomorrow in the only game scheduled by the Bay State Soccer League.

MRS. HOWE WINS SQUASH TITLE

Mrs. William F. Howe of Weston, national women's squash champion, had little difficulty annexing the championship crown in the finals of the Harvard Club championship squash racquets tournament today.

Mrs. Howe defeated Miss Helen Norton of Boston in three straight sets, 16—13, 15—4, and 15—11.

Although Miss Norton put up a hard fight in the first set to extend the national champion, the young challenger was unable to maintain the pace and dropped the second set without a struggle.

Mrs. Howe ran out the final set 15—11 without once running into difficulty. A large gallery of women squash enthusiasts witnessed the final battle.

Schoolboy Slants

—By GEORGE W. GRIMM—

Sixteen local runners will wend their way to the Penn Relay Carnival next month. Half of these boys come from Everett high and the remainder from the school that has been one of Everett's main rivals, Medford high.

Both Medford and Everett will enter 440 relays and have a good chance of breaking the record made by Mercersburg, 44 seconds. Everett made a great showing last year at Penn and Medford's win over Boston English in the State meet stamps them a first class quartet.

Eighty-five candidates reported to Coach Bill Joyce for the initial workout in the Lynn Classical gymnasium. The team has six veterans and looks good to be somewhere near the top of the new Essex County Baseball League. Coach Bill Joyce has not handled baseball for three years. The boys are glad to see the popular mentor back again.

Captain Bill Ryan of Boston English may have to undergo an operation and may be out of the first few games of the baseball season. This will be a big blow to their chances as he is one of the best school backstops.

Lawrence is following on the heels of Peabody and Beverly and will hold a Boosters Day April 19, the opening day of the Eseex County league. The Lawrence Men's Business Club is backing the team and it looks as if baseball in the Essex County district is going to come back with a bang.

It now looks as if Lowell High may have a baseball team after all. Faculty Manager Hannigan is trying to enlist the help of different clubs in the Spindle City and if this is brought about the diamond game in this city will flourish and the old battles with Haverhill and Lawrence will be resumed.

Mr. Boston

—By JACK CONWAY—

PAUL BOWSER has cut the Welfare Department of the City of Boston in for 25 per cent of the gross receipts of the world's heavyweight championship wrestling bout between Ed Don George and Henri DeGlane, title holder, which will take place at the Arena a week from next Thursday night.

DeGlane is getting 30 per cent of the gate, while George will pull down 20 per cent.

Mr. Boston

Bowser will pay all other expenses which include rental, cost of preliminaries, office help, police and setup of Arena, out of the remaining 25 per cent.

This means that Paul will not make any profit for himself out of the star match of the season. He will get his satisfaction in knowing that 25 cents of every dollar that rolls into the box office will be turned over to the welfare department to be used to relieve the suffering of the poor of Boston.

Mayor James M. Curley tried to secure the Boston Garden for this show as he felt the Arena will not be large enough to care for those who wish to attend the match. Curley could not get the Garden on account of the fact it is leased to the Fabiani wrestling forces.

The Arena has seats for 9000 persons, and standing room for 3000 more. It will be jammed when DeGlane and George enter the ring.

The fact Nick Lutze, most colorful wrestler in the world, and Jim Browning will collide in the semifinal makes the card the greatest offered since the Boston Evening American's Christmas Basket show at Braves Field last summer.

Junior Championships Will Furnish Thrills

I LOOK FOR plenty of thrills at the junior amateur boxing championships that take place at the Arena on April 4 and 5 under the direction of the B. A. A. There will be simon pure battles here from all parts of the country. This is Olympic year, and this means additional interest in boxing.

Florida boxers will add new interest to the tourney. The Jacksonville Association is a new one, and it is putting forth some first class boxers.

Steinke to Give Masked Marvel Test

HANS STEINKE wil go shooting at the Masked Marvel in the semifinal to the Jack Washburn-Sandor Szabo bout at the Boston Garden on next Wednesday night. Steinke has shown a world of wrestling class in his recent appearances at Toot Mondt's shows. He is a big, strong fellow who is also a fine student of wrestling. He may pull the mask from the Marvel.

It is unfortunate for Steinke he happens to be under the management of Ed White as the latter is also pilot of Jim Londos. This fact keeps Steinke from getting a crack at the Greek heavyweight.

BILLY AMES of the Garden says it looks as if he will be successful in signing Lou Brouillard and Johnny Indrisano for an April 8 date. Just now only a difference of a pound in weight is preventing the signing of the contracts. Brouillard wants the bout at 150 pounds, while Indrisano favors 151.

YEAH! That bird, Billy Petrolle, is a real fighter. He throws his left hook to the jaw and body like Jack Dempsey did when in his prime.

St. Pius Courtmen Battle St. Mary's

Two outstanding basketball teams clash tonight when the St. Pius five battles St. Mary's in the first game of a three-game series for the championship of Lynn at the new Lynn English high school.

These two clubs have great records for the season, St. Mary's winning 31 out of 33 and the St. Pius five winning 28 out of 32. Last year St. Mary's won in three games and is a slight favorite this year.

Martin, Leahman in Lynn Mat Fray

Two rough wrestlers meet when Bull Martin tackles Charlie Leahman in the main bout at Lastara Hall, Lynn, Monday night.

Rugby Game Off

The rugby game between Harvard and the French Sporting Club of New York has been indefinitely postponed because of the poor condition of Soldiers Field.

LIFE'S TRAFFIC LIGHTS— WE NEVER HEED THEM

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE TROUBLE with most of us, in love, in politics, in finance—in most of the things in this world—is that we don't obey the traffic lights. We never know when to STOP! We never know when we've got ENOUGH!

Enough money, enough love, enough fame; enough to eat, enough to drink — enough whoopee! We are all "Oliver Twists," continually demanding "MORE."

WE NEVER KNOW WHEN TO STOP
"US"

Most women never know when they've got enough clothes—and lots never know when they've got enough wedding-rings or ex-husbands.

Some men go to pieces and die before they have ever really LIVED, because they won't heed the traffic signals and stop working and piling up the dollars. And others go to pieces and pop off before their time, because they won't stop playing and give their tired old heart-valves a rest.

The man who struggles to hang onto political power too long, only succeeds in wrecking his nerves and making [illegible] hated. And the woman who struggles to hang onto her youth, and her vamping power too long, only succeeds in getting a solarplexus blow in the vanity and making herself ridiculous.

You can feed a woman flattery from noon until midnight—and the next morning you'll have to begin ladling out the applesauce all over again, or be accused of "neglecting" her.

Many a man's love has been strangled to death by a woman's persistence in hanging around his neck and sighing for "more love," more kisses, more money or more of his time.

A woman just can't see a traffic light! She never knows when to STOP—when to stop talking, when to stop arguing, when to stop coaxing, or when to LET GO! She will vow never to speak to a man, again—and then call him up next morning, just to tell him that she "meant it." A woman's "goodbye" always means 'au revoir'!

If a man only knew when he had enough money, enough liquor or enough women in his life, and a woman only knew when she's had enough romance, enough popularity and enough [illegible] most of the heartaches, headaches and heartbreaks in this world would be avoided.

Because, the secret of happiness and of success in everything, from work and love to after-dinner speaking, consists in watching the traffic signals—and knowing when to STOP!

MURDER OF THE NIGHT CLUB LADY

Third Death Was Due to Suicide

By ANTHONY ABBOT

THATCHER COLT flashed me a baffling glance of his great dark eyes. I could not understand why Baldwin's accusations against Rowland had failed greatly to excite the chief.

[illegible]

"Fortunately," he replied, "we have had Rowland shadowed. His movements from the time he left the pent-house until this moment are unquestionably a matter of police observation. It is possible to conceive that Rowland struck at Lola. But how could he have killed Christine?"

And after a moment's pause Colt added:

"If Vincent Rowland is guilty of these murders—and it is perfectly possible that he is—then he is using some device, or some confederate that we have not as yet discovered."

[illegible]

"Bitten by the same bug and right in the neck," was the medical examiner's terse comment. "No doubt of the symptoms this time. I could spot them from here to Welfare Island. And no doubt of my certificate—plain case of suicide. But I guess you better ship him down to Bellevue and let me do a complete job."

"Exactly!" concurred Thatcher Colt. "Meanwhile I have done as much as possible here. Tony, notify Flynn to send for the body. Meanwhile, I want to ask a few questions of that young lady outside."

[illegible]

"I must talk with her," he said. "I was afraid she would be gone. Let's go right upstairs. We have that luncheon date with Dougherty but I must see our girl detective first."

[illegible]

"Now," concluded Colt, "I would like to talk with Miss Lox."

[illegible]

"Very little to report, Mr. Colt, except that old Mrs. Carewe spent a very restless night. She talked in her sleep."

"Say something important?"

"I made a stenographic record of all that she said. Would you like to have me read it to you?"

"By all means."

[illegible]

"That beast! That dirty beast! Ah, yes! I know who it is. Basil! Basil! Basil! Be careful!"

[illegible] that she said nothing at all.

"But about 6 o'clock this morning," Dorothy hastened on, "she began to talk again. She seemed half awake and half asleep. This is what she said:

"'I am going to tell on Mr. Rowland. What do I care if he tries to harm me? No one can harm me. Rowland thinks I don't know. I'll tell Mr. Colt—I'll tell him about Rowland—I am not afraid——'"

"Anything else?" prodded Colt.

"That was all," answered Dorothy.

"I think," said Colt, "I had better talk to Mrs. Carewe."

But why would he not send directly for Vincent Rowland?

Remove Cause to Clear Up Asthma

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

ASTHMA is an uncomfortable disease, characterized by periodic attacks of shortness of breath. These attacks are accompanied by signs of irritation of the bronchia, tubes with expectoration of mucus.

Dr. Copeland

The accepted theory is that the symptoms are produced by a spasm which involves the muscles of the smaller bronchial tubes. To be frank about it, the causes of the spasm has furnished a real problem to the medical profession.

The exciting causes of asthma are many. Some cases, readily traced to pollen, may occur only in the Summer months. Others, perhaps due to hidden infections in the throat or nasal sinuses, may occur only in winter. Sudden changes of temperature, cold winds, indigestion or some emotion may be followed by attacks.

You know that certain foods appear to be more or less poisonous to some persons. Such poisonous effects include asthmatic symptoms, but in a recent survey less than 50 per cent of cases were traced to such causes. Contacts with horse dandruff, feathers, cat hair, sachet powder, orris root or rice powder were found responsible for attacks in certain patients. In children articles of food such as eggs, cereals and in rare cases cow's milk, have been found to be responsible in some cases.

In all cases of asthma the first requisite for successful treatment lies in discovering and removing abnormal conditions of the nose and throat. Centers of infection in the teeth must be found and eliminated. Brilliant results in children have followed the removal of diseased tonsils and adenoids.

Nasal catarrh and bronchitis should be treated, and undue nervous excitement, undue emotional experiences and overfatigue must be avoided. Treatment with certain medicines and vaccines will do a lot in favorable [illegible].

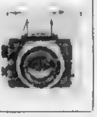
At the Big Roundhouse

With the Candid Camera

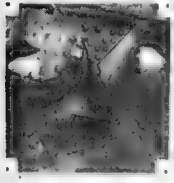


Nothing more interesting in the world to me than a railroad. I was out to watch the activities behind the engines that speed on the rails of the New York, New Haven & Hartford. I didn't know where I was heading—but soon I found myself in the shop section of the Southampton st. roundhouse.

General Foreman F. P. Croumey (left), and Traveling Engineer Ralph Hammond were discussing maintenance of engine power. These men must see that all those speedy passenger and freight engines are always in the best of condition.

That derby rests on a busy sector, for Chief Engine Dispatcher Thomas J. Morrisey has plenty to think about as he directs movements of locomotives.

Down there under an engine I caught Assistant-General Engine Foreman John Weschron planning necessary repairs with Foreman William J. MacDonald.



The boilers must be right. They must be tested. That's the big job that these men must look after. Let's meet Boilermaker Foreman Arthur C. Hampton and Foreman John Griffin, tapping for defective spots.

KREUGER-TOLL STOCK REPORT QUESTIONED

The banking firm of Lee, Higginson & Co. today issued the following statement regarding the financial status of Kreuger & Toll Co., whose stock a great number of [illegible] hold [illegible] certificates.

"Following Mr. Kreuger's death, the board of directors of Kreuger & Toll Co. created a commission to co-operate with it in an examination of the affairs of that company. That commission has today published a statement to the effect that the company's position is not strong and that should its affairs have to be wound up at prices obtainable at present, it is not certain that its assets would be sufficient to cover its liabilities, even if participating debentures were excluded."

REPORTS DIFFER

The commission has not furnished us with the data upon which its conclusion is based. The conclusion reached, however, is strongly at variance with the company's published report covering its operations for the year 1930.

"It is also at variance with the statement of Mr. Kreuger as chairman of the board of directors of the company, to the American press made on January 28, 1932, covering the then position of the company, and with the information given to this firm by Mr. Kreuger during his visit to the United States during January and February, 1932.

"The report of Kreuger & Toll published in May, 1931, covering the previous year's operation, showed a net worth available for the participating debentures and shares of $272,000,000, based on the consolidated balance sheet of the company, verified by the committee of auditors appointed under the company's statutes. The largest item in the balance sheet was the holding of foreign government and other bonds totalling $112,000,000, this value being certified to by the accountants as based on the market price of those or similar bonds as of December 31, 1930.

156 MILLION ASSETS

"The report of the company's activities covering the year 1931 would normally be published in April or May of this year, as has been the custom in prior years.

"During the visit of Mr. Kreuger, head of the company, to this country during January and February of this year, he reviewed with us the present position of the company and submitted a tentative balance sheet as of December 31, 1931, which, subject to minor adjustments, he stated would be published in the forthcoming annual report.

The balance sheet showed a net worth available for the participating debentures and shares of over $156,000,000 after writing down to the market value of December 31, 1931, all of the company's foreign government and other bonds and listed securities, or an asset value of over $16 per American certificate.

PROFITS 21 MILLIONS

"These figures showed a net profit for the year 1931 available for participating debentures interest and dividends approximately $21,000,000, equivalent to about $2.19 per American certificate. At the same time Mr. Kreuger furnished us with details covering the anticipated cash position of the company throughout each of the months of 1932 based upon a detailed presentation of its receipts and disbursements, indicating its ability to meet all its obligations without increased borrowing and showing an increasingly strong cash position in the later months of the year after due allowance had been made for contingencies arising out of exchange transfer and otherwise.

"Representatives of this firm are in Stockholm endeavoring to clarify the situation and we will proceed by all means at our disposal to assert the rights of investors in the securities of Kreuger & Toll Co."

SPECTATOR Says:

The Washington tax muddle is again haunting the market. Wall Street fears that the uprising of the insurgents against the sales tax may have "cooked" the market "goose" for the present as leaving the sorely-needed balanced budget up in the air. Expectation of a worth while rally, it would seem, must be deferred until this situation is clarified.

American Telephone

Funny about telephone. The bulls on it say the stock is worth $125 a share. The bears come back and say $75 is plenty . . . Well, the stock is nearly half way between these figures, which seems like a fair compromise. And even on a $6 dividend, assuming the present rate is cut drastically, would yield better than 5 per cent at current levels, which is far more than you can count on in steel, for example.

Here and There

The increase of 15 cents a barrel in crude oil, assuming as is expected, it will be made general, will mean more than $30,000,000 for petroleum companies in inventory mark-ups . . . Current domestic crude oil stocks are well above 600,000,000 barrels . . . Which strengthens the prediction that oil earnings should show a decided turn this year . . . Reason for mounting gasoline stocks is attributed to the fear of an import tax. Another influence was the desire to build up inventories from cheap crude oil . . .

'Crank' and Gypsy Theories Advanced in Kidnaping

By WIN BROOKS

CHAPTER IX

Two theories in connection with a [illegible] motive in the Lindbergh kidnaping are included in the morning mail and seem deserving of elaboration.

One is the "spurned inventor" theory, the other the gypsy theory.

Both are advanced by a correspondent who does not wish his name used but who takes us to task for stating that outside observation on the part of the kidnaper could not have told him the dog was not in the nursery. Our [illegible] points out that the dog was [illegible] the pantry and [illegible] the Lindbergh home were [illegible] and this does [illegible] that the kidnaper [illegible] the house [illegible] by seeing [illegible]

[illegible]

"I think the baby was kidnaped from revenge (writes one critic) for some rebuff, fancied or real, from Col. Lindbergh to the kidnaper.

Lindbergh Pestered

Cranks Often Dangerous When Spurned

"The kidnaper may have asked Col. Lindbergh to take an interest in some new invention or other business matter, hoping to use the Lindbergh fame. If he was a fanatic with some crazy invention this theory would be doubly strong. He might believe himself wrongfully spurned and he might figure that Lindbergh's refusal to enter into the scheme had deprived him of wealth and fame. Of course Lindbergh has been pestered for years to lend his name to all sorts of crazy enterprises."

[illegible] appear [illegible] aeronautics [illegible] have pestered or sought to [illegible] Col. Lindbergh [illegible]

[illegible]

Fiend for Agony

[illegible] the Gypsy Theory May Be Postponed

I [illegible] mind one particular gentleman who arrived in the city room one day wholly unable to contain himself because he had invented red, white and blue. This being quite a change from the usual run of newspaper office cranks, he was accorded a good [illegible] of attention.

He had a several hundred page manuscript [illegible] with data [illegible] to prove that red, white and blue had at last been invented and that he invented them. A disparaging comment upon the worth of his invention transformed him instantly from a mild-mannered [illegible] type of person to a raving [illegible] paperweight [illegible]

It is quite conceivable that somewhere among the cranks who have pestered Lindbergh there was one of this type who plotted revenge in the kidnaping.

Such a mind might not consider [illegible] through the [illegible] knowing the fate [illegible] actual death.

[illegible] of certain links the motive of revenge with the motive of actual possession. They are [illegible] in the gypsy theory, the [illegible] correspondent [illegible]

"I don't think the baby will ever be returned to its parents, but he isn't [illegible] dead.

A century and more ago, kidnaping [illegible] in England was an established racket practiced by the gypsies. Sometimes the child was returned to its parents on payment of large ransom but more often revenge was the motive and the child never was returned.

"Land owners who refused to allow gypsy caravans to camp in their fields were common sufferers. So common was the kidnaping of children by revengeful gypsies that most popular stories of that time always had the young heir kidnaped by gypsies.

"And don't you recall in the opera 'Il Trovatore' that the young Italian noble boy is kidnaped by gypsies and brought up as a gypsy boy?

"The gypsies were brought under control in England by the passing of laws requiring them to report to police, wherever they settled, or penalty of deportation if they did not."

What Is Your Theory?

What is your theory of the Lindbergh kidnaping puzzle which has aroused the entire world, and which has baffled the collected police talent of the entire nation? Your theory is as good as anyone's at this time. Send your idea to the Lindbergh Case Editor, the Boston Evening American.

ONE READER ADVANCES THE THEORY THAT A CRANK INVENTOR WAS THE KIDNAPER ....

... OR THAT SOME WANDERING GYPSIES COMMITTED THE CRIME......

Search Gypsy Camps

Mother Complex Points to Woman Admirer

New Jersey has many gypsy settlements but whether any of their members ever had real or fancied cause for grievance against the Lindberghs has not been established. Police have not overlooked the gypsy angle and many gypsy camps have been searched.

However we are wandering aimlessly pretty far afield when we start conjecturing as to actual reasons for any particular motive and the only possible value of this discussion is to establish that the motives of revenge and possession may be linked.

Possession may be made to stand alone as a motive in several different hypotheses.

The soundest of these, and the only one that will be discussed here, involves a man or woman, more probably a woman, who is childless, who has the mother complex, who is a fanatic admirer of Lindbergh and his feats and who is overcome by violent desire to possess and raise his famous child. This is a psychological possibility with sound precedent.

A large percentage of the very young babies kidnaped are taken by women or girls for this very reason. BUT—a large percentage of those so taken are restored to their families in short order, either voluntarily or through police detection.

(TO BE CONTINUED MONDAY)

Theories of Readers

Yesterday's mail was the heaviest to date to the Lindbergh Case Editor. Al Capone and an "inside job" continued to predominate in readers' theories. Following are some more excerpts.

RANSOM-DEATH

"I believe the baby was taken for ransom and I fear that as he was sick at the time of the kidnaping he may have died. As the kidnapers cannot produce the baby they have abandoned their plan to get ransom. I think someone on the inside knows more about the kidnaping than anyone else."—Ida Dunbar, Boston.

KNEW BABY SICK

"The kidnaper was not mad. He was no amateur. He knew the baby was sick. But he also knew that the most opportune time had arrived because he had an inside contact. He climbed the ladder, but he didn't climb through the window. He has the baby safe and well."—Raymond C. Jewell, 318 Spring st., Fall River.

ANOTHER CAPONE

"Capone will be released and find the baby safe. Capone will return to his cell, but only for a short time."—A Lady Citizen of Cambridge.

CAPONE AND INSIDE

"It was an inside job and the baby was handed through the window to the kidnapers. It wasn't for ransom. The best way to get the baby safely home is to free Capone."—L. Shats, 6 Merrill st., Dorchester.

ONE WOMAN INVOLVED

"I think that three persons took part in the kidnaping, one a woman. Three automobiles or maybe more were used to get the baby away. Detectives and police have done their best. Call them off. Release Capone."—Mrs. A. M. F., Quincy st., Roxbury.

HELD NEAR HOME

"I believe the child is within 20 miles of its Hopewell home. Someone spent a great deal of time near the home. He was not a stranger in Hopewell. He knew the alarm would result in the guarding of all roads and he knew a nearby refuge was the safest."—James F. Moriarty, 33 Pine st., Holyoke.

OUT THE DOOR

"Three persons: One of light weight stood on the ladder looking through the window; another, inside, lifted the baby from the crib, and the one on the ladder flashed a signal to a third in hiding, who stepped to the front door, took the bundle from the one who lifted it, and fled. This was not a professional job."—Unsigned, Boston.

ALL INSIDE

"There is no question in my mind but that the kidnaping was all inside work. I feel that too much confidence has been placed in one servant who has been questioned the least. I believe ransom was the motive and that the ladder was a blind. The baby was carried through a door."—Mary F. Bertwell, North Conway, N. H.

Maine Central Has Deficit of $63,386

Maine Central Railroad pamphlet report for 1931 shows a deficit of $63,386 after fixed charges, the same as preliminary statement. This compares with surplus after charges of $1,112,099, equal, after preferred dividends to $8.01 a share on 120,071 shares of common stock outstanding in the hands of the public in 1930. After payment of preferred dividends in 1931 there was a deficit to profit and loss of $213,386.

Waltham Fails to Sell $100,000 Loan

Newton will receive bids until March 28 for $100,000 loan due Nov. 3. Waltham reports no sale on $100,000 temporary loan maturing Nov. 17.

STATE ST. Hears:

That the next price move is just about anybody's guess. When prices have held within such a restricted range for so long, there are few technical factors which help to determine their probable course. About the only recourse of active traders is the hedge adopted here last Saturday. Usually reliable tape readers continue to feel further reaction will precede any profitable upswing.

Review

Looking back at the actual performance of prices, without considering external influences, certainly creates the impression prices will sag before rising. The persistency of buying at the recent lows is strongly suggestive of unhurried short covering. This is apparently for the account of large bears unwilling to run the risk of borrowing after April 1.

With them out of the way the market surely loses a cushion against declines and could easily witness a fast shakeout of weakly held longs. Another signal on the tape that points to a setback is the very definite ceiling halting upside progress. This is thought due to liquidating orders placed by important banking interests. Until this ceiling is cleaned up, stock prices can make little progress.

STOCKS LOWER ON DEFEAT OF SALES TAX

New York, March 26—Pivotal shares sold lower in today's trading on the New York Stock Exchange, reflecting defeat of the sales tax in Congress. It was the first session of the exchange after the adverse vote on the sales tax plan and the effect of the House action was written all over the market.

Moderately active liquidation swept through most groups, and a number of the rails, as well as some of the industrials broke to new lows for the bear market.

SELLING IS SLACKENED

Selling slackened in the last hour, but recoveries from the low levels were largely limited to small fractions. The closing tone was weak, and the two-hour turnover was around a million shares.

Although some of the February earnings statements that have just appeared were somewhat better than expected, rails were under considerable pressure.

Atchison tumbled nearly 4 points to a new low since 1908. Reading, traded for the first time since the dividend was halved, was off about 4. New Haven preferred dropped 10 points to 40. Southern Pacific sold off more than 2 points and Pennsylvania a point to new bottom prices.

American Telephone was under considerable pressure, presumably reflecting estimates of first quarter earnings under $2 a share, or less than the dividend of $2.25. According to brokerage house rumors, some of the selling came from Canada.

Motors were under some pressure. Some quarters held to the theory that the defeat of the general manufacturers sales tax might result in a special tax on automobiles.

The oils, however, were well supported, on news of House approval of a special tariff of 1 cent on oil imports, and firming crude and gasoline prices.

KREUGER IS ACTIVE.

Kreuger & Toll was churned over in considerable volume, selling between a dollar, its former low, and its new bottom at 75 cts. a share.

The bond market was unable to recuperate over the Friday holiday and lower prices were the rule in today's brief session.

Even the United States Government list, which has been running counter to the general trend during the past week or more, softened moderately. Losses, however, were for the most part small, although the activity was more pronounced than on Thursday.

Announcement from Stockholm that a moratorium would be asked for Kreuger & Toll as a result of the unsettled situation brought a precipitate slump in loans of the Kreuger group. Kreuger & Toll 5s and both International Match 5s fell to new low records for the year. The former dropped around 9 points at one time, while the latter were off about 5.

TODAY'S NEWS OF LEADERS

OILS were well supported today but the rest of the market was called on to absorb widespread disappointment over failure of Congress to pass the sales tax legislation. Motors were under pressure, as stories were circulated about plans to impose fresh tax burdens on the industry. Tobaccos were heavy for the same reason.

Speculators Reducing Their Short Lines

Germany May Forbid Use of Foreign Exchange

Private European advices are that Germany may shortly forbid the use of foreign exchange to pay interest exceeding a seven per cent rate on external governmental and private loans.

Gold Sponsors Again Active

United-Carr Corp. Net Income Higher

United-Carr Fastener Corp. of Cambridge and subsidiaries for 1931 reports a net profit of $94,876 after depreciation, interest, federal taxes and minority interest, equal to 38 cents a share on 2[illegible]0,000 shares, as compared with $67,909, or 27 cents a share in 1930.

Insurance Company Has Biggest Year

Des Moines, Ia., March 26 (AP)—The Equitable Life Insurance Company of Iowa reported its 1931 total income was $29,360,116, the largest in its history. The total of new paid-for business during the year was $63,248,079.

On the Air

The "What's-Become-Of" Dept. Here are names of radio stars of a yr ago. Where and what are they today? Roy Atwell, he of the tangled talk; Wendell Hall, the [illegible] noise maker; [illegible]; Peter [illegible] and the rest of the Around the Samovar cast; [illegible] the [illegible] authority; [illegible] the pioneer [illegible]; Evan [illegible]; [illegible] and Dennis Hughes of [illegible] Etc.

Stray Thought No. 11: "Only God can make a tree." But none of the trios, it seems, sings about it without paining hearers.

The Prince of Wales will be heard on the NBC Apr. 23 when he is aired during the opening of the Shakespeare Memorial theater at Stratford-on-Avon . . . Stokowski brings his Philadelphia Symphony back to CBS for another two hr concert which will be devoted to American composers. For the modernists Aaron Copland will be represented but strangely enough not Gershwin and Grofe . . . At last b'dcasters have seen fit to select a woman as adviser on ladies' features on one of the networks . . . The man behind the throne on the oncoming Ziegfeld Follies of the Air will be Eddie Dowling who'll assist in the production.

Music and skits from the annual Harvard Hasty Pudding Club show will be radio previewed on WBZ at 11:15 this eve. If you like satire don't miss this one . . . Jack Benny will supplant Ed Sullivan as master of ceremonies on the WNAC hair wash p'grams Tues eve . . . "By royal command" of Pres Hoover the Sisters of the Skillet will play a return engagement in Washington . . . Virginia Rae, better known as Olive Palmer, is ready again for the radio but is holding out for a juicy sum . . . Joe Rines promises rare Cuban rhythms on his WBZ b'dcast at 6:45 this eve.

Stray Thought No. 12: Radio stations brag in huge quantities when a p'gram makes its air debut, but when it concludes its series b'dcasters try to conceal the fact although it's just as newsy to list'n.

The VOICE OF BROADWAY

BY LOUIS SOBOL

Voices of Broadway!

Haunting voices . . . taunting voices . . . voices that sneer and curse and bully and jeer . . . between-the-teeth voices . . . pleading, beseeching, imploring, singing, bragging, laughing voices . . . exhorting, declaiming, framing voices . . . cooing and booing voices . . . and once, at midnight, behind an open, dirty-curtained window in the Fetid Fifties a choking sob that cut through the lush Spring night like a knife.

"Gotta nickel for a cup of cawfee? . . . BALCONY SEATS ONLY! . . . wearin' suspenders, the big pansy!" . . . "and I said lissen, sweetheart, the hell with your contract" . . . "say, who ya pushin'?" . . . God, I hate crowds . . . 'Mornin' papahs!" "and so I said" . . . 'I' . . . "I' . . . 'I' . . .

"And, my friends, He died so that you—and you—and you might live" . . . 'right this way for tickets . . . take a toy home for the kiddies" . . . "only two bits" . . . "I told him" . . . I . . . I" . . . "I' . . .

Voices of Broadway . . . tall, husky, grim-jawed Jack Dempsey with his shy demeanor and baby-tenor voice . . . the deep, guttural tones of Garbo . . . Bert Lahr's seal-like sounds . . . Ed Wynn's lisp . . . the unforgettable Barrymoresque . . . That's all there is—there isn't any more . . . the magnetic timbre of Mayor Walker's voice . . . and an off key duet sung by two bedraggled looking females shuffling past Gray's . . . each holding out the tin cup . . . Rose Marie at the Nut Club in the Village . . . and the student jeers and laughter that greet the entertainer's high falsetto soprano . . .

"Racing sheet out!" . . . "and if you know what's good for you, keep that trap shut!" . . . low, ominous growling voices . . . threatening voices . . . loving voices . . . "honey, you've got all the synthetic white haired mamas beat a mile" . . . "Hi!" . . . Okay, keed . . . "Officer, where can I find 42d Street?" . . . PAHdon me.

The crooners, of whom there are too many . . . and the Belle Bakers, of whom there is but one . . . Belle Baker singing Eli, Eli, with the tears streaming down her face . . . Belle Baker singing Buddy, while an audience bites on its lips . . . Belle Baker singing "Old Playmate," while your spine grows brittle and the lump in your throat threatens to split it wide open . . . Belle Baker, who puts all the heartbreak, all the yearning, all the love and longing and understanding and sympathy in one long-drawn-out note.

Hyam tallink you, it's batter you shouldn't" . . . "oh, deah, no indeed; this is mehely a slumming pahty!" . . . "set 'em up, Joe!" . . . "God, I'm sick of everything! What's th' use? What's th' use o' livin' anyway?" . . . "Aw, c'mon, girlie, have another lil drink!" . . . and never, once, the voice of a child . . .

Broadway . . . where once the only sounds were the tinkle of cowbells and the high whistle of a Dutch boy—loping leisurely down Heere Stradt, turning into Petticoat Lane, stopping at the Kissing Bridge (which is now Canal Street), and watching the twilight sift through the tall chestnut trees which lined the lane called Broadway.

MADELINE.

Cricket, What?

Sir Malcolm Campbell, the speed king of the auto track, has a sense of humor. He chuckles all over the place every time he tells this one. Shortly, it seems, he will carry his huge projectile to Australia to tear off a few more records, and his chief rival will be a fellow named Brown. Brown implored the Australian government recently to equip his car with a motor that would stand the gaff. The Australians, in turn, appealed to the British government, and the generous Britons donated the motor. And the motor they've donated is the same powerful type employed in Sir Malcolm's car, only a later model. Some fun, hey?

Oh, Hum!

One of the outstanding flicker critics of the country is Carol Frink, brilliant scribbler for one of the leading Chicago newspapers. A gal of biting wit who can transfer the vitriol to printer's ink when (and if) the occasion requires. So it was with keen anticipation that those in the know looked forward to Carol's review of the picture, "The Sin of Madelon Claudet." For the star of the film was Helen Hayes, and Helen Hayes is the wife of Charles MacArthur, the playwright, and Charles MacArthur was before he married Miss Hayes the husband of Carol Frink. Just what would a man's ex-wife say about his present wife? Well, this is what she wrote—make the most of it: "She (Helen Hayes) hits the heights and depths of life at such an amazing pace that it makes Garbo's 'Rise and Fall of Susan Lenox' like a ride on a department store escalator."

Last Night!

I had said to myself
"You are through with loving.
You will never be alive again."
But in the back of my head
I knew that one day
I would walk into a room
And a man would look at me
And I would look at him,
And suddenly the world
Would rock and reel and spin,
And I would be scorched once more
In ecstacy.

And I was right—
Last night!

Trend of the Times!

The cut-rate theater ticket policy inaugurated by the late Joe Leblang and still conducted by his organization is too well known to rate much space or explanation at this time. But now the enterprising agency has gone a step farther. For $1.25 you can buy a ticket for a $2 meal at the Paramount Grill. Leblang's, I understand, pays $1, earning a quarter on each transaction. It isn't too much to expect now that this organization or some similar concern will shortly be selling us cut-rate tickets for haircuts, overcoats and shoes and perhaps even for drinks at the speaks.

TIME WE GOT USED TO PROSPERITY, 1932 MODEL

By GILBERT SELDES

I WONDER HOW MUCH LONGER it will take us to get used to our prosperity. A lot of people needed only a month or two to become accustomed to adversity in 1929 and 1930; they were rapidly instructed by what we delicately call "the force of circumstances;" but prosperity, model 1932, has been with us for a long time and we still refuse to admit it. We are still looking for prosperity to jump at us (from around the corner, of course) and take off its mask with a merry laugh; what we will not concede is the possibility that there is no mask, that what we see is its real face. I can understand why. We are thinking of that rosy-cheeked Santa Claus we knew four years ago; we think we are seeing one of Jimmie Durante's "impositators," merely Depression in disguise. We may be wrong.

GILBERT SELDES

A Moral Fable

One of the most pleasing stories in the world, "The Happy Hypocrite," by Max Beerbohn, tells of a certain Lord George Hell, who was as wicked a man as you would care to meet in the pages of history and one on whom Heaven had had its just revenge, for his soul being hideous, his face was hideous, "even also." Lord George fell in love with a sweet girl, who was frightened by his countenance, so he went to a magical mask-maker and commissioned a new face, all radiant with purity and kindness. In this false face he wooed and won the girl, deserted for her Vauxhall Gardens and the haunts of vice, lived on buns and milk in the country. Then one day a cast-off mistress appeared, and, furious, tore off Lord George's mask. In terror of his beloved he turned away, but she cried out and asked him hyh he had worn a mask when his own face was so much nobler and kinder and purer. (Even if this report doesn't make it sound attractive, you might try the original.)

Facing the Face

I am suggesting that underneath the present mask of our time, which is so hard and depressed, the true face is not much different. Like Lord George Hell's face, it has grown into the contours of the mask. I do not mean that prosperity as of 1932 will continue with six million or more men out of work, with official "no starvation" reports by governors, while hundreds of thousands have not enough to eat, with various Ivar Kreugers committing suicide and the stock market committing murder. All I mean is that the next 10 years may not suddenly release the spring and make us rich and easy again. We are in for difficulty, and thinking that we are not, that next month or the next election will flood us with money, isn't making things any easier.

What Signs Have You?

If you don't like this kind of prosperity you can keep on calling it depression. In that case I should like to know the grounds for hope. There is, I believe, one way to make the process of shrinking, our inverted growing pains, less painful, but I haven't seen many signs of it in the sky. It is obviously the way of intelligence. Intelligent people have got together in books, but except for a few radical groups they haven't assembled in person. A few individuals have put forth schemes, and most of these schemes have defended the private interests of those who propounded them. But if the great economic brains of America have foregathered, and compared notes and plans, and arrived at a method of action which will save them, let alone us, from disaster, they haven't let us know about it. They assume that because we drifted into depression we can drift out again. It may be true, but it is not comfortable navigation.

"Let's Forget It!"

I heard recently of an estimable woman with a true, kind heart who deplored the raising of $18,000,000 in New York for the relief of the unemployed because, she said, so large a sum only advertised an unfortunate situation. She wished people would give generously, but without drives and publicity. She is in a fair way to having her wish. The large sum she deplored was pitifully inadequate; and since it was raised the problem of unemployment has gravitated more and more to private organizations. The American Legion, the block canvassers, are trying to get jobs for people; the government, still assuming that money power is the basis of prosperity, is asking us not to hoard money (a grim joke) and is financing banks and railroads in the hope that ultimately this financing will be used to give people jobs.

The New Scale

It is a hard thing to say, but this withdrawal of interest on the part of the government, this dropping out of sight of the unemployed, is one of the signs of getting used to our new scale of prosperity. If a great five billion dollar bond issue had been created and public works had been started, we should still be trying to save ourselves. Without them, with official indifference to those who want only to work (and find no work), we are pretending that everything will have to be all right, because if it weren't all right, wouldn't we be doing something about it? It is a swell argument. But it doesn't sound right. Not in America. Not even in 1932.

POLITICAL NEWS

HEAVIEST "REP"

Speaking of statistics—did you know that the heaviest man in the Massachusetts legislature is Rep. John J. Whalen, of Brockton? He tips the scales at 300 pounds. Rep. Arthur L. Youngman of Medford is a close second. He weighs 295 pounds.

WHY, MR. LAMOUREUX!!

For the benefit of the curious who wondered how Rep. Wilfred A. Lamoureux, of Southbridge, keeps up the women's long silk stockings, which he has always worn, it may be stated that he uses ordinary round elastic garters. His preference for women's silk stockings is due to the fact that they keep his legs warmer than those ordinarily worn by men.

RIORDAN TO CELEBRATE

Charles F. Riordan, of Sharon, vice-chairman of Democratic State Committee, will celebrate his 66th birthday at his home. Congratulations are already pouring in on him from all parts of the country.

MURPHY HAS COLD

Mayor John J. Murphy, of Somerville, is harboring plenty of "cold" germs he'd like to get rid of. His Honor could hardly speak during a recent visit to the State House and was wishing he was stretched out on a Florida beach having a sun bath.

COUGHLIN CAMPAIGNS

Capt. Willian P. Coughlin, candidate for Legislature in East Boston, is conducting a house-to-house campaign there. Each evening he calls on voters of the district seeking their support. He says that his many efforts to improve conditions for the children of the district will bring him the support of the great majority of East Boston parents.

FOLLOWS BASEBALL

"Jim" Balfe, of the statistics department, is the most enthusiastic baseball fan in City Hall. He knows the records of every player on both Boston big league teams.

SAME AS MOTHER

The little daughter born recently to Mrs. Stanton R. White, wife of the municipal director of public celebrations, is to be called Sally, after her mother, the former Sally Curley, niece of Mayor Curley, and daughter of Former City Treasurer John J. Curley.

CURLEY GETS CARDS

Mayor Curley's many friends never forget him at Easter, and as a result several thousand greeting cards have been received at City Hall during the past 48 hours. They were forwarded to the mayor at his home in Jamaicaway, where he is now confined because of a heavy cold.

DINER HOLDUP NETS $45

Paul Zografos, counterman at a diner at Dorchester st. and Old Colony boulevard, was robbed of $45 by two armed men early today.

Zografos, who lives in East Seventh st., South Boston, told police there was no one in the diner when the pair entered. They drew guns and ordered him to lie on the floor, throwing an apron over his head. One then went behind the counter and took the money from the cash register.

'Whacks, Wheels, Gunsel' New in Gangland Parlance

Chicago, March 26 (AP)—The fertile wits of gangland may not be earning much money these days, what with Capone in jail, but they go right on making language.

Out of the badlands that gave the nation such familiar phrases as "taken for a ride" and "on the spot" flows a continuous stream of new words and new usages for old words.

Changing conditions with new demands on vocabularies, new symbolisms grasped by the gangster mind, or mere need for terminological novelty have given rise to a number of so far unrecorded phrases in recent months.

To save dictionary compilers headaches with the next editions, the principal linguistic departures are here summed up with their meanings:

Mr. Whiskers: A general term for the Federal Government, especially its law enforcement officers, as opposed to city police.

Troops: A substitute for "mob" or "gang."

Whacks: General term for any form of force, most often used in the phrase "to put the whacks on" some one.

Wheels: Substitute for "big shots"; leaders of a gang.

Ta-ta: Term for a machine gun.

Gunsel—Either a stupid or a treacherous person. It comes apparently from the Yiddish word "gantzal," a gosling.

Nature-Ray—"All right" or "O. K." as in the phrase: "I'm feeling nature-ray." It evidently is based on violet rays.

Toy some one—To betray or to double-cross. The usage comes from the practice of some speak-easy proprietors in mixing near beer with real beer through a double or Y-shaped pipe.

To go out in the country—"Taken for a ride," most ride victims being found in an unpopulated spot.

Machine Gun Gang Kill Harlem Woman

New York, March 26 (INS)—Panic spread in Harlem today when gangsters in a speeding sedan raked a sidewalk with machine-gun bullets.

Mrs. Lulu Miller was shot dead. Frank Burch, 28, was wounded.

GUARD AGAINST MEXICAN RAIDS

Santa Fe, N. M., March 26 (INS)—Adjt. Gen. Osborne Wood, son of the late Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, and head of the New Mexico State Military Department, today considered a request of residents of Columbus, N. M., for protection.

Columbus residents, fearing a repetition of the bloody raids of Mexican bandits on their town in 1916, appealed to Gov. Arthur Seligman and to U. S. military authorities at Fort Bliss.

Tells of Kidnaping

JOAN LOWELL

JOAN LOWELL ON STAGE

A first hand account of her experiences in Hopewell, N. J., and the Sourland Mountain regions will be given from the stage of the Keith-Boston Theater tomorrow only, and as part of the Keith radio program, by Joan Lowell, noted author and feature writer for the Boston Daily Record and the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Joan Lowell, the only newspaperwoman from Boston to be assigned in Hopewell to cover the Lindbergh kidnaping, formerly lived only five miles from the Lindbergh estate and the usually suspicious Sourland natives, viewing her as a neighbor, talked with her where they would talk with no one else from the outside.

She will describe her interviews with "Old Antonia," the pig woman, who declared the kidnaping was plotted last July and will relate other of her experiences with the natives, whose domain Joan searched with the troopers.

So This Is Prohibition!

SPEAKEASY
NO DARK FLOORS HERE
T. E. Powers

T. E. POWERS' ACCURATE PICTURE OF WHAT WE ARE PLEASED TO CALL "CIVILIZATION"

This is AN ACCURATE PICTURE OF WHAT WE CALL CIVILIZED LIFE IN AMERICA.

Many hotelkeepers are driven to bankruptcy. Many of the finest hotels are in receivership now. The most expensive hotel ever built in the world, one that in decent times under a sane government, would have rewarded the energetic men that put their money into it, can be bought now on a basis of eight cents on the dollar for its bonds. Its stock is worth nothing.

Another hotel that cost more than seventeen millions of dollars has been bought in, completely furnished, for less than four million dollars. And the furniture alone cost five millions.

All this is due to PROHIBITION and its speakeasy system, to the hypocrisy of prohibition, the corruption of government officials, the fanaticism of prohibitionists that have brought upon this country the greatest curse since the Civil War, and that ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR THE PRESENT DEPRESSION.

In a big city the traveler arriving at a hotel, takes a moderately priced room, puts down his valise.

Then he goes out, asks the elevator boy: "Where is the nearest good speakeasy?" The boy can give him the addresses of a half dozen within a block of the hotel.

In fact a speakeasy is within a block of ANYWHERE in a big city. There are fifty thousand speakeasies in New York. There are some that make ten thousand dollars a week and more, merely renting cheap, antiquated residences, admitting their customers through basement doors, and selling them poisonous liquor at extravagant prices.

If a first-class hotel, decently run, were to sell beer or light wine in its dining room, government agents would be energetic about it. They would padlock the hotel, arrest the waiters and the owner. Everybody knows that before prohibition came to curse this country with its hypocrisy, bootlegging, and crimes from racketeering to kidnaping, the hotels of the country were run respectably, a man could have a glass of wine or beer with his meals. There was no drunkenness, needless to say, in respectable hotels.

The speakeasies are nests of drunkenness. You can see in them dozens of young girls, sixteen years of age and upward, sitting at the bar, drinking cocktails, vilely concocted, and every other bootleg compound that they choose to order. Gunmen gather there watching opportunities. Occasionally murders are committed there. And there is absolutely no effort made to interfere with this traffic that makes drunkards of young women, finances crime and ruins the owners of reputable hotels.

The government makes no effort whatever to correct this condition. Occasionally a raid is made, usually because the person raided has failed to pay blackmail to some official living on the bootleg industry.

In Boston, New York or Chicago there are few policemen that couldn't take you to twenty speakeasies within an hour. There isn't a prohibition agent that doesn't know about dozens of them, or that could not find out about them if he chose.

Nothing is done about them. But let one hotel break the law, even to the slightest degree, and see what happens.

We live under prohibition managed for the benefit of bootleggers, blackmailers, bribe takers, keepers of speakeasies, racketeers and gangsters, and all of this IS DUE TO PROHIBITION, THE BIGOTS THAT FASTENED IT ON THE COUNTRY, THE FANATICS AND HYPOCRITES THAT CONTINUE ITS RULE.

Intercoastal Rate Wars

Cutthroat competition of sixteen intercoastal steamship lines threatens to wipe out a $100,000,000 industry unless Uncle Sam comes to the rescue. To save the warring companies from themselves the Government is asked by the industry itself to regulate coastwise freight rates. Self-regulation has proved futile. Bankruptcy is the alternative, says the industry, unless it is placed under Shipping Board regulation, patterned after the railroad regulation of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

President Hoover and the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Shipping Board have urged legislation to curb this evil. Senator Hiram Johnson, California, has a bill before the Senate which would enable the Shipping Board to provide for filing by companies of actual (rather than fictitious) rates, and, in certain cases, to fix actual minimum rates upon the complaint of an operator that a competitor is offering unduly low rates. This amendment to the shipping act of 1916 would give the Shipping Board the power it now lacks to investigate such schedules and to force compliance with its pronouncements.

By all means, this bill should be passed. Our ocean commerce has become sluggish from lack of effective governmental aid and supervision. We have failed to become the power in foreign trade we should be. We cannot afford not to protect trade in home water.

New York Day by Day

At the Theater

NEW YORK, March 26—Most people enjoy themselves at the theater. But not I. I'm just here to be stepped on or glared at. That baby, for instance, just passing, wears hobnails tonight in my honor. And the fidgety lady on the left awaits a tense moment to drop something.

Such as a candy box upside down or half-eaten orange. If it's candy I hope it's in tinfoil. You can sneak that kind in your pocket and it will keep. Why should I sit stiff as a poker and timid as a mouse, never laughing out loud? Other folk are having a gay time. Old Death's Head at the feast!

Rather a good seat, too — third row fifth from the middle aisle. But I'm only here temporarily. The usher will be here soon, as usual, demand the coupons, find I'm in the wrong pew and lead me, red-faced, to the other side of the house. I'd like to drop something in that ear trumpet before I go.

With six million people in New York I must, of course, sit in front of a lady who saw the show at Atlantic City. No, she's seen it twice. Once at rehearsal and once at Atlantic City. I'm glad that's ironed out. I might have gone on thinking she only saw it at Atlantic City.

Her husband is a friend of the producer. Isn't that perfectly ducky? He also backed a musical show once and it got grand notices but he aroused the ire of ticket agencies. And it closed in two nights. Still the theater is just a hobby. He's in commerce really. And raises ire on the side.

George Jean Nathan always comes early, folds his coat neatly and sits on it. I must make a note to give neatness a twirl. I've taken up almost evehything else, except glass ball shooting. Hark! the angel's wife is in again. Her husband knows John Ringling.

Well, so do I. That makes us fellow Moose. We should know each other better. How about taking me to lunch some day? You're in trade but I'm democratic. I even speak to Courtney Ryley Cooper. Here's the usher now. Toodle-oo, glad to have metten you. No, she's seating Percy Hammond.

I wish I could fill a seat like Percy. When he sits down, the seat is filled and no monkey business. Stand up! A number in an ermine coat. I'm nuts for ermine. She recognizes someone and stops smack in front of me to wave. What a nice shoulder. If she stands there much longer I'm going to snuggle my head on it and coo. She's going on. No trouble at all, lady. I love to stand up at night. I've been sitting all day, anyway. You know, writing. Yes, indeed, literary, belles lettres and that tosh. Shall I autograph your program? I suppose the old billygoat behind you is the husband.

My cough seems to annoy that oyster-eyed whatisit with chin spinach. So that's it. If my throat tickles I must keep swallowing like a jackass with the heaves. Well, you coffin-headed soandso, I'll bark when I like. Share this among you—ack, ack, ack. What did you ever do I should hold in a cough for you? I suppose you are one of the R. Fulton Cuttings or the likes. Handle this one, sucker, I'm a tax payer and Jimmy Walker and I are just like that.

* * *

Something must be done, too, about the buzzard roosting in back. All of a sudden he takes up seat kicking and is making it hum! Hear!—tap, tap, tap. I'd turn around and slap the old woodpecker's face, but it might start a panic. Maybe he's a burnt out roue testing his knee jerks. It won't hurt to turn and scowl. Well, I'll be — it's a stunning girl. Lady, kick all you please. Wait, I'll get a hammer, good looking, and you can rap my head. Doing anything after the show? They say the Two Bit Cabaret is fun. Here's the usher. On the other side of the house, my eye. My coupon calls for the last row in the balcony. Alpine Ned on The Rialto. O, well, I'll yodel on my way up.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

"Thy Will Be Done"

AND NOW the end was near. The Passover was finished. His apostles had slipped away and night was shutting down. There could only be a few short hours.

But perhaps in that time—

It might not yet be too late. If God would listen—

If God would only understand!

He did not want to die. He was too young. His work had hardly yet begun—His work, that was to sweep the world like a great flame, cleaning the world of lies and cruelty.

But if He died—if now He let Himself be crucified—

It could not be! God, surely, would not let them do this thing—not let them wreck a work so fine and true—

If He asked God for help, not for Himself, for He was willing to endure all pain, but for His work—that precious, holy work on which His heart was set—

If He asked God to let Him live and serve?

And so, as was His wont, He sought a place to pray. And taking Peter, and old Zebedee's two sons, He went into the garden of Gethsemane, and said, "Stay here and wait"; then went away, apart

(As you and I, in our dark hours, have gone to battle with our agony—alone.)

How dark it was beneath the olive trees! How hard the rocks beneath His stumbling feet! There were no stars; no friendly, homely sounds. Only a little wind moved, restless, whimpering.

Poor, young, thin hands outflung into the night!

Poor eyes, that strained through darkness for a light!

Poor, breaking heart, that [illegible] was just a man's—a young man, desperate, pleading for His life!

Down on His face he fell and cried to God:

"If it be possible let this cup pass!"

Silence. He waited. But no answer came. Only the darkness, brooding, like a swing. Only the restless whimpering of the wind.

That sudden noise below? Had they already come?

Hands clenched, His body breaking in a bloody sweat, again He sobbed:

"Father, if this cup may not pass—except I drink it—"

Then a pause.

What did He see in that last glimpse of hope? His own spoiled plan? No, something greater.

Through His blood and tears He saw a vision of a greater plan—of a vast will that reached beyond His own — that made all things come right in God's good time.

His sobbing ceased. His wringing hands grew still. He rose, stood steady, felt a tide of peace—and cried:

"THY WILL BE DONE."

And so went calmly down to Calvary.

For each heart waits, some time, Gethsemane.

To each life comes that darkest, desperate hour when it must battle for the thing it loves—Fight God, Himself, for that which it holds dear.

And, for a while, we only see our own spoiled plan, and sob and bleed and batter on the night.

Then present, if we are patient, there will come an answer.

Not that soft, easy answer which we asked; not God's consent to let us have our way; but a brief glimpse of something larger than "our way"—of something better than our little, treasured plan.

If we are patient, and if we are strong enough to cry "Thy will be done!" that glimpse will come.

And after that, whatever life may cost, it will be worth the price.

For those who "lose their life shall have it."

Those who walk with God, though they die for it—they shall glimpse His Glory. They shall share His Might.

Just Folks

Evening at Home

When comes the evening hour and I
Have heard no call to sally forth
To east or west or south or north
To dance while night time hurries by,
Or skill at contract bridge to try,
I'll just stretch on the couch and rest."

My lady, wondrous sweet and fair,
Who has adventured much with me,
And who knows my habits to a T,
Says coldly: "If you nestle there,
You'll fall asleep and I declare,
I'll sit alone, as oft before,
Hearing the music of your snore."

"No! No!" I say, "I'll merely doze,
Take 40 winks, and then I swear
We'll play at double solitaire,
Or any game which you propose.
I will not let my eyelids close.
I'll just lie down, my precious one,
Until you get the dishes done."

My lady shakes her lovely head,
Almost as if she doubted me.
A sneer, I fancy, I can see.
The next I hear is: "Time for bed!
Our interesting hours have fled.
You've slept this happy evening through,
As I predicted you would do."

Brandeis' Solemn Warning

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

ON MONDAY insurgents among the miners in the anthracite region in Pennsylvania broke away from their union leaders and went on a strike. It has ugly aspects. In all such controversies we hear that the "Communists" are responsible solely; and while the Communists will always take full advantage of every opportunity, we are not prepared to ascribe all dissatisfaction today to "Communism."

In Ohio the miners' strike has entered upon the violence stage, with the strikers stoning officers and the Governor calling out the troops. In Congress we have been hearing some very bitter attacks upon the very rich. And in the Supreme Court Justice Brandeis startles the cathedral quiet of the famous little room, where Webster once thundered, with a solemn warning that the crisis of today is infinitely more serious than war, and that the safety of the State and of society summons us to new experiments in social and economic adjustment. Unpleasant as this all is, it is infinitely better than having high functionaries or the State tossing optimistic assurances of returning prosperity among the millions who are jobless and hungry.

More Serious Than War

Of course this crisis is more serious than war.

There is something inspirational in the music of drums and of marching men carrying flags. It carries an emotional appeal. Since war is waged against a foreign foe it is easy to draw all our own people together in opposition to a common foe. Men gladly sacrifice, reduce on their food, sacrifice for the State. And while some may doubt the wisdom of a war, the sentiment is so strong and running so high, that these keep silent. Even the sacrifice of human life has its compensations—

For fame is there to tell who
deeds.

There is nothing inspirational in the crisis of unemployment and hunger. The victims of the battlefield are heroes; everyone feels a wave of emotion when they fall. But the victims of an economic, industrial, financial collapse—there is no applause for them, and, we are afraid, too, little sympathy. We see families being set out upon the street without interest. We turn indifferently away from the jobless man who asks for money on the street. We prefer to hear nothing of the neighbor whose children are not getting enough to eat.

"The Greatest Country in the World"

The difference between war and such a crisis as this of today, in its effect on the State and on the established order, is that in war we are all united for the State and the established order, while in this crisis millions are embittered against the State and established order. It is the difference between a foreign war and civil war; the latter is far more dreadful than the former.

Here goes a man with a family who has worked industriously all his life without getting enough of what he produces to save much money, and is now denied the inalienable right to work—for bread. It is not an easy thing to assure him that this is "the greatest country in the world," that we have the most perfect social, industrial, financial system on the earth, that we must all band together under the flag to maintain the status quo.

His answer is this: "Give me work."

And that is where the to optimistic find themselves—in a blind alley.

A Terrible Indictment

Justice Brandeis is said to have spoken with some emotion from the bench in commenting on existing conditions. No doubt some of his associates were shocked. It is not pleasing to hear that our system, governmental and otherwise, is not justifying itself today to millions of jobless men and tens of millions of women worrying because their children are not getting proper nourishment. It is shocking to some to be told that "existing conditions threaten even the stability of our capitalistic system"—to quote Brandeis.

But all this is true; they touch on elemental defects in our governmental, social, industrial, financial systems, and these defects are, in a large measure, responsible for the devastation we see about us.

Behind it all, explaining it all, is greed, the worship of money, the idea we have been trained to—that the one mission of worthwhile men is to pile up money, no matter how ruthless the method.

Machinery has enormously increased production; and while it is an insult to empty stomachs and underclothed bodies to say that our trouble is over-production, that is what we hear. The trouble is under-consumption.

No society can indefinitely maintain itself against the fact Brandeis sets forth—"Misery is widespread in a time not of scarcity but of over-abundance." That is a terrible sentence, a terrible indictment.

The Problem That Must Be Solved

And that is the big thing, the great problem that must be solved through drastic reforms in government, industry and finance.

But no one is paying any attention to them.

We have had White House conferences on way and means to help the distressed in Europe. And White House conferences on ways to serve the railroads, and White House conferences on methods to serve the banks.

But the request, much more than a year old, that a White House conference of industrialists, financiers, workers, economists to work out the reforms indicated by Justice Brandeis as necessary be called, is shunted aside.

And the reason? The foolish idea that cheap temporary patches on the leaky roof will save us from a deluge; the evident inability of our leaders to understand that this is no ordinary panic, such as we have had before.

Can't Do That Forever

And the bitterness which is growing among the millions of the masses who are denied their inalienable right to work, is due to the feeling that Government is concerning itself solely with the problem of helping the rich and powerful. Two billion dollars have been set aside from the Treasury to make loans to railroads, and great industries—and railroads borrow the money from the people's treasury to pay the banks on loans.

We have the case of the Missouri Pacific Railroad and J. P. Morgan & Company. The great banking house will not lose because money from the nation's Treasury will prevent its loss; and whether the railroads will be able to pay back the money of the people is with tomorrow.

But every suggestion of help for the people who are jobless or hungry is "unsound" or a "dole." Of course it is not the customary thing; but when before was it a customary thing to loan money from the Treasury to Big Business? We break with traditional methods for money, and appeal to tradition when it comes to men. We can't do [illegible] forever.

Brandeis Sees It

There ought to be some Federal action for the jobless.

There should have been some Federal consideration for [illegible] hungry.

There must be some governmental initiative on the industrial and financial readjustments necessary for the preservation of our system.

America's function was set forth by Jefferson in the Declaration:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal; that they are endowed with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; . . ."

It is because we are not thinking much about men today that so many bitter things are being said against money. Brandeis sees it.
